Tobacco acres may increase

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

LITITZ — There could be a significant increase in Lancaster County tobacco acreage this year.

After stabilizing at between 13,000 and 14,000 acres for a number of years, tobacco plantings may jump by 10 percent or more, according to preliminary indications from growers.

The expected increase in tobacco acreage is just one of several situations prevailing as the spring planting season moves into full swing.

–Area tobacco farmers have a new weapon in the fight against blue mold in the expanded use of Ridomil now in seed beds.

–Recent April showers and rains have substantially improved soil conditions in just the past couple of weeks.

–An explosion of corn planting is expected during the next week or so as soil conditions now appear to be quite favorable for good germination.

–Costs of planting inputs are showing increases over last year of up to about 10 percent, excluding the price of fuel which jumped substantially following the oil decontrol measures by the Reagan administration.

–Some farmers face a perplexing choice of corn or soybeans. Market expectations appear tipped in favor of corn, but the lower cost of inputs for beans may appeal more to those farmers facing extra tight financial conditions.

–Thus far, alfalfa appears to have gotten off to a favorable start toward a good first cutting.

The recent rains have helped in moving the emerging season ahead on a more positive note, with the hope that they will continue to fall at the proper timely intervals throughout the coming growing season.

The anticipated increase in the tobacco acreage is the result of the generally good year just experienced by many growers. A good yielding quality crop brought a price that was more than 10 cents a pound above the price of the previous year.

Then too, tobacco was one of the Local farmers and veterinarians testified this Tuesday on the restart of TMI-1 reactor, proposed by Metropolitan Edison Co., They accused the Commonwealth's emergency plan as being inadequate and impractical. More coverage on page A-20.

Testify on TMI reactor start-up

Farmers say state plan impractical, inadequate

BY SHEILA MILLER

HARRISBURG — Hearings concerning the restart of Metropolitan Edison Co.'s Unit 1 reactor at Three Mile Island held here this Tuesday focused on the impact it would have on area farmers. Appearing before the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board were three local farmers and two veterinarians who practice within the 10 mile radius of the nuclear plant.

The main thrust of the farmers' and veterinarians' arguments stemmed around their feelings the Pennsylvania emergency plan for agriculture during nuclear incidents is inadequate.

Paul M. Lytle, Jr. of Middletown, a dairy farmer milking 100 head of cows, expressed concerns for his livestock in the event of an accident at TMI-1.

"They (his cows) are a lifetime investment, but they are more than that to me. Each one is known to me by name and I consider them my employees. I have never missed a milking during the entire time I have been farming.

"During the TMI-2 accident, I stayed to take care of my cows. However I had lined up three trailer trucks to remove my cows if I judged that it was needed.

"I would not have abandoned my cows for two reasons — my attachment to them for the service they have given me over the years and the financial investment that they represent," he said.

House to hold hearings on commodity voting practices

BY CURT HARLER

HARRISBURG — Eastertime did not slow agricultural legislation either in Harrisburg or in Washington, D.C.

In the state capital, the House Agriculture Committee Tuesday voted unanimously to hold public hearings on HB 767 which calls for the elimination of cooperative block voting on ag commodity referendums.

In the nation's capital, meantime, there were almost as many measures being proposed for the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981 as there were cherry blossoms on the trees.

HB 767, introduced by Clarion County Representative David Wright, would amend the state Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act to eliminate block voting.

At the hearing the lines were sharply divided over the benefits of such a measure. Pennsylvania Farmers Union supported the idea, but large dairy co-ops opposed it.

Pennsylvania Farmers' Association policy is split over the three changes, but PFA indicated it will not support the measure. The Grange opposes the measure as written.

If it becomes law, HB 767 will take away cooperatives' current right to block vote for their membership.

Under present law, if a co-op member fails to vote in a generic advertising program, the co-op board may vote for him. A farmer can vote against the co-op by submitting a separate ballot.

In addition to changing block voting, the measure also would change Section 6 to increase the majority needed for passage of a referendum from the current simple majority to a two-thirds majority.

It also modify Section 8 of current law to require a three year review of such programs, instead of the existing five year period.

Hallowell cites fire safety at Farm Show

HARRISBURG — State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell this week defended overall management of the Farm Show Complex, stressing that protection of the public has always been a "high priority" of department personnel.

Hallowell's comments came in reply to charges levied at a news conference earlier in the week by Auditor Gen. Al Benedict that an investigation of the complex revealed fraudulent overtime, mismanagement and faulty plumbing that may threaten the building.

Hallowell further explained that the overtime investigation had been requested by his department and the results had been publicly announced by the Auditor General even before he had an opportunity to see the report.

"I question his judgment in making the announcement as he did," Hallowell said.

Allegedly involved in the fraudulent overtime is Norwood Henninger, of Gratz, Dauphin County, former building supervisor of the Farm Show Complex.

Benedict said that Henninger allegedly claimed $5,400 in overtime to which he wasn't entitled. Henninger was dismissed on Tuesday.

"Several hundred hours of overtime had been submitted during 1980 and we suspected possible irregularities," Hallowell said.

"We requested the investigation in February and Henninger was first suspended. When the Auditor General's Office didn't make a report, we brought Henninger back on the maintenance staff at the Summerdale Labs.

"When we received the report, which confirmed our tentative findings, it was decided, coupled with other management objectives, to terminate Henninger."

Concerning the faulty plumbing system and its effect on the Farm Show Complex, Hallowell said there is no evidence that there has been any structural damage because of the water. He also termed the situation that water was covering gas lines as not a big problem.

From chick to cage, we formulate feeds and feeding programs with your profit in mind.

At Pennfield Feeds, our basic goal is to help our customers make more money. We believe we can accomplish this for you, too.

Unlike many other feed companies, we develop custom feeding programs for each individual operation.

It all starts with a Pennfield man reviewing your operation with you. Your goals. Your records. The health and overall condition of your birds. Whether you grow chicks or buy pullets. The type of equipment you use. The production potential of your flock. Your management practices. And other factors that have an effect on your profit potential.

With the aid of computers, we then design a feeding program specifically tailored to your birds' needs — a program that can improve your profits by reducing expenses, increasing production, or both.

And we're a local company. We buy our feed grains locally. Shipping savings are passed on to customers. Our feeding programs are developed through test work and field t' 'als based on local conditions.

These and other Pennfield advantages are helping hundreds of customers increase their profits. We can do the same for you. Phone or write us today.

NEW SERIES 102 ROLLFEEDMOBILE ANNOUNCED

Greater productive capacity coupled with greatly increased operating efficiency and decreased fuel consumption are incorporated in the 1981 version of the well-known mobile feed processing machine, the Series 102 FEEDMOBILE

This mobile feed mill that processes animal and poultry feeds on the farm where they are used from farm produced grains and roughages has been completely re-engineered to reduce weight by more than 20% to reduce operating fuel consumption by more than 33%. At the same time productive capacity and speed has been increased A completely re-designed drive train has fewer bearings, chain and belt drives and gear boxes with the result that friction has been materially reduced to lower power demand

Productive capacity has been increased to 1,000 pounds per minute by enlarging the mouth of the patented underfed hammermill The hammermill will handle whole bales or roughage at lower rpm's

The 102 cubic foot capacity mixer includes micro control for more accurate proportioning of feed ingredients A new feature that further improved ingredients proportioning is an optional, automatic scale

The new design also facilitates maintenance by reducing the number of belt and chain adjustments and replacements needed to keep the 1981 FEEDMOBILE in continuous, productive operation

The 1981, Series 102 FEEDMOBILE is available equipped with the new hammermill, with an improved, high-pressure roller or a combination of these two systems for processing farm grown materials to make highly productive animal and poultry feeds with much lower fossil fuel consumption, less labor and at lower operating costs

Through midweek slaughter steers 3.00-3.50 higher. Heifer 2.50 higher. Cows steady to 50C lower. Bulls steady.

Four day receipts 13,593; last week 13,947, a year ago 11,737.

Steer and heifer prices ranged higher for the fourth consecutive week, reaching their highest levels since December of 1980. Broad advances in the beef trade, which is usually quite dull during the week preceding Easter, fueled the advance. Demand by most interests was excellent as a generally optimistic outlook prevailed throughout the industry. Choice cattle producing yield grade 2-3 carcasses enjoyed the best demand; although percentage wise, the number of cattle displaying yield grade 4-5 tendencies, was reduced from previous weeks and these kinds shared in the week's full advance.

Steers made up 47 pct of 4 day receipts, heifers 35 pct, cows 7 pct, feeders 7 pct.

Lancaster Farming says...

One farmer, one vote

Few farm measures in recent years have so much potential to divide the farm community as HB 767 does That bill proposes to eliminate cooperative block voting on commodity referendums.

Usually proposed laws can be seen as pro-farm or anti-farm This one is likely to divide farmers across commodity groups, and to split members of big co-ops from their independent neighbors.

The two sides faced off for the first time Tuesday in Harrisburg But there will be further rounds — the House Ag Committee unanimously voted to hold public hearings on HB 767 at a date to be determined

The measure has three goals eliminating co-op block votes, requiring a two-thirds majority to pass a referendum, rather than a simple majority; and requiring review of all programs every three years rather than five as now provided by law

The first point is well taken Why should a co-op be allowed to vote for an individual?

One dairy co-op, in defending the practice, said if there is something wrong with block voting, then there is something wrong with the entire representative system of government

They note "modified block voting" allows a co-op member to vote against the co-op position

There is a hidden flaw in the argument While individuals do vote for persons to administer or initiate programs, nowhere does our government provide for selling, willing or otherwise passing along one's vote on an individual membership basis

A father can't cast votes for his family Democrats who miss an election don't see their ballot automatically cast for the party platform

Some nations levy heavy fines against those who don't vote The American way always has been to penalize a non-voter by eliminating any say in the issue

Although many good commodity programs became possible becuase of block voting, the danger of abuse is real

The 'modified' provision places a burden on dissenters that doesn't even fall on those too lazy to vote Why assume a farmer is for something unless otherwise stated? Why not assume the farmer opposes the issue unless willing to stand up and fight for it? A farmer needs the right not to vote without turning his say over to a hired hand

If a co-op wants to mobilize its membership, let its leaders give talks, make mailings, lobby lawmakers

The voting percentage also will be a hot issue.

Tallying some commodity checkoff votes almost requires an expert in statistics or mathematical manipulation

"If a majority of producers representing two-thirds of the production, or two-thirds of the producers with a majority "

Confusing? What ever happened to good old American majority rule?

Sure, a lot of poor programs have been voted in because a majority voted for them U.S Presidents are elected with the votes of only 25% of the nation's population But majority rule wins

The current measure would require a simple two-thirds vote But rather than this constitutional quota to pass or defeat a program, let's stick to simple majority rule

Program review after the first three years will give a prompt redress if enough farmers feel a measure is a mistake After that, why not maintain the five year review period to save the taxpayers money and allow the program to flow smoothly?

Make no mistake, we support promotion, if done properly

Any farmer who may be asked to vote in a checkoff program should make his feelings known at the upcoming hearings After all, what good is an unused vote?

MAKING THE TOMB SECURE

April 19, 1981

Background Scripture: Matthew 27:62 through 28:10.

Devotional Reading: 1 Peter 1:3-9.

If you've ever visited the tomb of Abraham Lincoln in Springfield, Illinois, you've probably marveled, as I have, at the sheer massiveness of that structure. The guide told us that the reason for this was that, when the martyred President was laid to rest there, it was feared that attempts would be made to desecrate the tomb or even to steal the body So the tomb was built in massive concrete to discourage any attempts upon President Lincoln's final resting place.

There was a somewhat different motive behind the Pharisees' request that Pilate have the tomb of Jesus securely guarded. They were afraid, not that someone would try to desecrate it, but that his disciples would spirit away the body of Jesus. "Therefore," they demanded, "order the sepulcher to be made secure until the third day, lest his disciples go and steal him away, and tell the people, 'He has risen from the dead,' and the last fraud will be worse than the first.'"

Make It As Secure As You Can

Pilate's response is as grudging as had been his condemnation of Jesus at the insistance of the crowd. "You have a guard of soldiers; go make it as secure as you can!" Perhaps all the Pharisees wanted was permission to post their own guards, for Matthew tells us, "So they went and made the sepulcher secure by sealing the stone and setting a guard." They made it as secure as they could.

But they could not make it as secure as they wanted, for, when the two Mary's came to the tomb on Sunday morning, they found that the tomb had not been able to hold their Lord. Jesus was risen!

In all probability the luckless soldiers sent to guard that tomb were severely reprimanded, probably even punished, for what happened at that tomb. It was the very thing they were sent there to prevent. But it was not the soldiers' fault for what happened. For any other person that tomb would have been secure enough. But it was the power of God himself they were trying to imprison and there is no way they could have kept the Christ in his tomb. No tomb, no guard, no power on earth could have kept Jesus from the victory of the resurrection.

Where He Used To Be

The two Mary's were shown the tomb by the angels so that they would know that Christ had arisen: 'Come see the place where he lay." For a few short hours the tomb had held the body of Jesus, but now nothing could contain him any longer. They tried to make his tomb secure, but they couldn't do it. And neither can we, although we sometimes try.

One of the motivations that lay behind the rise of Gothic architecture in the Middle Ages was the belief that the Romanesque architecture dwelt too much upon the suffering, dying Jesus and not enough on the risen, living Christ. So we have often unconsciously attempted to entomb Christ in our churches, our creeds, our theologies — making them as secure as we can, but failing because. "He is not here, for he has risen...!"

To Check Alarm Systems

Many farms have alarm systems, and unless they are tested regularly to determine that they will function immediately in an emergency, they may create a false sense of security. It is important to use a test record form. It should contain columns for entering the date of the test, initials of persons performing the test, and comments. An alarm system should be tested at a specific time, at least once a week

The completed forms should be filed for insurance purposes. If the system is not designed to operate under farm conditions, the chances for malfunction are increased. Dust and dander, fertilizers and chemicals, gases and vapors are all problems that can cause malfunctions on most alarm systems which use electro-mechanical components Also, power surges and lightning can be most damaging.

To Check Water Supplies

Your water supply should be checked at least once a year for nitrates and bacteria Nitrates can get into ground water from several sources - from a septic field, a barnyard or feed lot, silage seepage or from nitrogen fertilizer on surrounding cropland. Nitrogen can travel farther through the soil than bacteria, with the likelihood that more wells may be polluted with nitrates than with bacteria

And, nitrates can be dangerous Nitrogen in drinking water reduces the ability of the blood to carry oxygen and causes symptoms of oxygen deficiency in people and animals If your drinking water hasn't been checked within the last year, then do it now. Also if you notice any changes in your water, such as an off-color, an unusual flavor or even an odor than be sure to have it tested immediately. Remember, these samples should be taken to the lab in either a container provided by the lab or a sterilized bottle.

To Apply Sprays

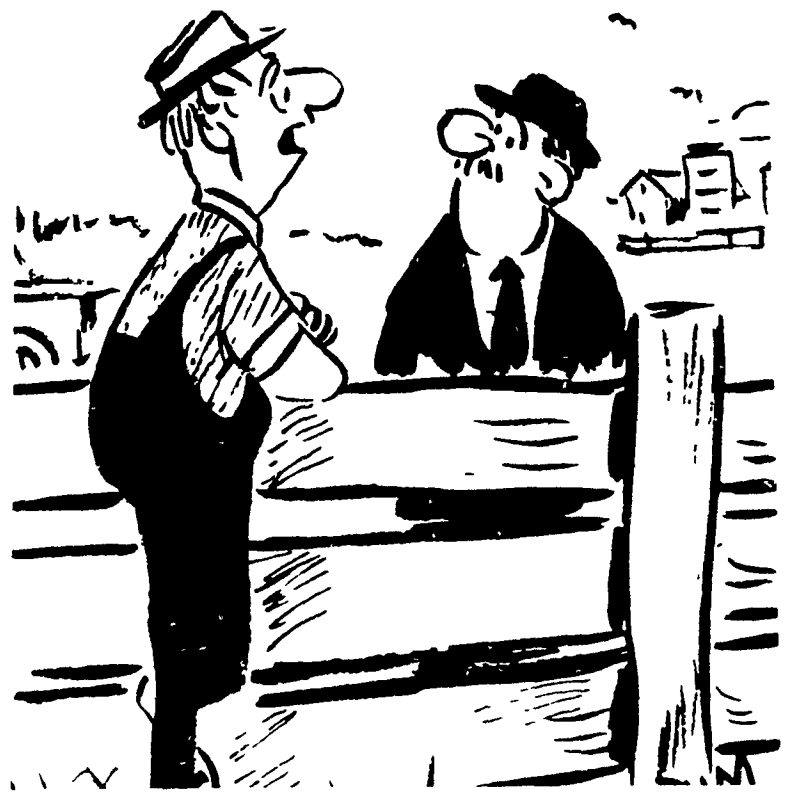
The highly intense agriculture demands the use of many types of pesticides. They are used for various farm, orchard and garden crops. It is important to know that every container or package of pesticide carries detailed instruction on how to mix and apply the material. These instructions should be followed closely. It is also extremely important to apply the spray at the proper time. In case of fruit trees, the weather has pushed them along very fast, and unless the grower was on the job, it may be too late for some of the sprays We urge prompt and careful attention to applying the proper spray at the right time Too late will not control the problem and may injure the leaves

To Consider Farm Pond Weed Control

It is always later than we think when weed control practices must be considered in early springtime All weeds have their own clever ways of getting a headstart on us Farm pond weeds become active in their growth long before we can see them This is especially true of

(Turn to Page A12)

HAY HAWS



I don't think we'll be adding any more poultry houses this year. With our recent heavy expansion, I'm losing about all the money I can afford for awhile.

In our balance of trade, the farmer carries a lot of weight.

One of the keys to getting America back on a sound economic path and to maintain a favorable balance of trade is to increase productivity. And when it comes to productivity, we can all take a lesson from the American farmer.

As one of this nation's great entrepreneurs the farmer has combined the resources of land, labor and capital more efficiently than practically any other segment of our economy.

The fact that Americans spend less of their income for food than any other people in the world is a testimonial to this productivity.

In the world market the farmer carries his weight, and then some. In fact well over half of all grain traded internationally is grown on American farms.

The answer is exports.

If we expect the farmer to continue meeting the challenge of rising world demand for food, then we must offer a fair return for his investment, his risk and his hard work.

One important way of accomplishing this is to assure the American farmer access to world markets for his produce. This means increasing farm exports.

Aggressively promoting our agricultural products overseas will help maintain fair market prices and a more favorable balance of payments, while assuring the farmer a reasonable profit.

Each of us must help each other.

Mechanization has been a major factor in increasing the American farmer's productivity and his ability to help feed the world. And Massey-Ferguson has played a major role in this mechanization. For 134 years, we have been helping the farmer help himself and others.

Massey is the free world's largest manufacturer of tractors, a major producer of combines and diesel engines, and a leading source of tillage and hay harvesting equipment.

We have a vested interest in the farmer — not only in his economic future, but also in his impact on our lives as individuals and as a nation.

Massey and its dealers are committed to the farmer's success. We back that commitment with our own resolve to continue offering the finest in agricultural equipment, parts and service.

Each of us helping each other — it's a Massey tradition, an American farming tradition.

Letters To The Editor

Dear editor:

Your recent comments on confinement housing for livestock were, to say the least, disappointing. For an editor with a gang buster's and grab the bull by the horns approach to writing, your April 11th editorial barely slapped the issue with a wet dishrag.

I'm still reading your article and trying to figure out whether you're walking down the fence rail or, having chosen an unpopular view, are skirting the issue.

If you've been bitten by the nostalgia bug — fine. I find galloping through green meadows and spring's breeze fragranced by warm earth a lofty high — even though the meadow's in housing lots now.

However, if you're a Dr. Fox disciple, what can I say? The Fox mentality supposes an ability to translate an animals "feelings" into human terms. The ability to understand an animal is indeed a true gift — and as such, I will have to see Fox interacting with livestock to even believe he knows what he thinks he knows.

It's not easy to trust a Doctor of Animal Science who likes his veggies better. I strongly suspect Fox is a Wolf in Sheep's clothing.

Using lobster farming in Utah as an example was a nice touch. You really scraped the bottom of the ideal barrel. I can only assume the initial was to tread lightly one local farmer's footsies, considering the relevance of lobster farming to your readership area.

By the way, do you think if the caged lobsters were shown films of scows dumping garbage etc. into New England waters that the lobsters would feel more at home?

You know there may be a time in the future when farmers live in condominiums. We'll raise chickens & rabbits on the balcony. Anything larger would require a spare den or bedroom (Hey Mom, Bossy's in the bathroom again!). Forget about herds or the pasture to graze them - as an old philosopher once said "As goes the hamster, so goes the caretaker." It never made much sense 'til now.

So, I'm urging you to speak your mind and make it plain. What we don't need are more spineless speakers for agriculture.

Karen E. Shaw,
Taneytown, Md.

Dear editor:

This letter is not just to the editor but to all the farmers who are at all concerned about their financial future.

When President Reagan won his first "great victory" in his war on inflation by cutting the April first price increase, I thought, well that's okay. We are producing too much milk anyway. Maybe this will be allright.

However, I have had second thoughts. I thought how did we get in this mess anyhow? We had a fairly good milk marketing system.

We had a government subsidy to stablize the market when we had surpluses from time to time which not only protected the dairy farmer but the consumer as well with adequate food at reasonable cost.

So what happended? Food for a weapon is what happened. President Carter started the grain boycott against Russia. Now President Reagan continues this same policy.

Therefore, where did the grain go? Well, it has filtered down to the dairy farm now. On its way it fouled up the chicken, beef and hog business.

Now our wise government officials are going to write a new farm bill. They are saying cut the price of milk still more, maybe down as low as 60 percent parity. We don't want to pay for all this surplus milk. These greedy farmers must be controlled. Maybe this is not what they are saying but from what I read it appears this is what they are saying.

If our government is going to use food as a weapon, I don't think we the "weapon makers", the farmers should have to foot the total bill.

While farming is a specialized business and becoming more so, you can't severely penalize one segment without eventually hurting all segments of farming.

Our farm exports have been carrying our nations floundering economy for the last several years anyhow.

In conclusion any farmer who is concerned about his financial welfare should be writing his congressmen and President letting them know we are fed up with being treated like vasals and serfs by an arrogant and thoughtless master.

Dear editor;

In reference to Mr Fasnacht's misstatements and distortions concerning your editorial "Enough is Enough," which could have been entitled "Enough is too Much," Mr. Fasnacht's first distortion is giving the impression, if not for the Commission's action of confiscation of these lands they most assuredly would have disappeared.

The truth is these lands would not now be under dictatorial power. Yes indeed, every acre would still be here and in the Free Enterprise System.

Next Mr. Fasnacht points to the Pocono, Bedford and Somerset areas as being developed on, shall we say, marginal land. Whatever he means he does not make clear. clear.

Any wonder developers are building where they are? The Commissions's confiscation policies have to a great extent forced them to these very areas.

Of course, according to Mr. Fasnacht people need outdoor recreational activities. To heck with housing needs. Housing is only a luxury. Recreation is a necessity.

Fasnacht tells us several statues have been enacted as incentives to keep land in agriculture. In spite of this land is still being taken out of production and developed, he states. This of course contradicts his earlier statement, concerning the development of the hilly and brushy Pocono, Bedford and Somerset areas.

In reference to the Commission's Policy being supported by Federation of Sportsmens Clubs, this is merely a case of I'll scratch your back, you scratch mine—We the Commission have the Power to condemn and confiscate for those who scratch our back.

Mr. Fasnacht's line concerning in-lieu-of-taxes is indeed disgraceful. He best would have zipped his lip on this. While private owners are paying $2 per acre for mountain land, I'd be dog-gone embarrassed disclosing a paltry 39 cents per acre as a defense.

Users of Game Lands use the roads leading to such lands and these are services indeed. Stating no services is a Fabrication.

Fasnacht cites the fact the Commission sells timber. There really is no great merit in that. Private owners sell timber also, adding income to the community.

the plankton algae. When these algae are overabundant we refer to this condition as "bloom" in the water. A bloom makes water appear as pea soup. Then the filmamentous (stringy) algae show up as long strands or green nets of plant material that often form floating mats. Sometimes it gets so thick as weather warms that the name pond scum is applied. The most effective acquatic herbicides against the algaes are those containing elemental copper. With all chemicals applied to ponds consider costs, precautions and any required permits.

GROUND PLANE

It could cut some pesticide cost 50% or more!

1 REDUCTION IN CHEMICAL RATES
Although additional research is required, growers in 1980, on thousands of acres throughout the U S A cut dosage rates 50% or more Savings reported by growers were as high as $20 00 per acre

2 REDUCED WATER REQUIREMENTS
C D A lets you cover more acres per day! Hauling water is all but eliminated Time lost refilling is all but eliminated The Ground Plane with one 150 gal tank can cover more than 300 acres without refilling

3 REDUCED DRIFT
At wind speeds of 25 k p h rotary atomizers produce less than half the number of drifting droplets that a fan nozzle in winds of only 5 k p h produces This means greater safety to other crops animals fish and humans

The Denlinger Difference in FARM BUILDINGS

It gives you three big pluses:

FLEXIBILITY
Denlinger truss construction can be used for poultry houses, equipment garages, utility buildings — you name it. Choose a standard design, or have us draw up a custom plan. Either way, you get a totally engineered building with high load-bearing strength and generous open area (thanks to the self-supporting roof).

LOWER COST
Denlinger wood truss buildings offer big savings. Our pre-engineered components reduce construction man-hours, require less skilled labor, eliminate material waste — and provide a finished structure in days.

SERVICE
Denlinger will work with the builder you select, or help you coordinate the entire project from plans to completion; the choice is yours. Either way, we go all-out to simplify construction and give you the building you need on schedule.

What is the Denlinger Difference?
It's a combination of tradition, technology, precision and service that sets us apart from the competition And it's why we should play a major role in your next building project We'll keep your costs down on the farm!

BIG FARM POWER AND EQUIPMENT

IF YOU WANT
From HOOBERS
FOR TWO SIMPLE REASONS:

1 Steiger Tractors are so dependable that when C.B. Hoober & Son Inc. and Hoober Equipment Inc. offer a stand-by tractor to cover spring break-downs, the standby tractor spends most of its time sitting and waiting for work that rarely comes. With over 136 tractors in the field they've only used the standby tractors 3 times in the last year. THAT'S PERFORMANCE.

2 When those three tractors did break down, Hoobers took them the stand-by tractor and the farmer's did not suffer any appreciable downtime. THAT'S SERVICE.

CAN YOU AFFORD NOT TO OWN A STEIGER?

Ladies' Day Out includes tour, fashion show, workshops

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LITITZ — The Lancaster County Farmers' Association is sponsoring its fifth heritage trail tour and Ladies' Day Out on Thursday, April 30.

Five homes will be open for touring in the morning at each participant's interest and leisure.

Ladies will meet for the first time that day at the Dutch Town and Country Inn, Route 30 east of Paridise.

A fashion show by the Knittery is scheduled during the luncheon.

In the afternoon ladies will be able to attend two workshops of thier choice. Michelle Rodgers is slated to speak on time management; an Ethan Allen interior designer will be discussing home decoration; and Glenn Eberly from "Country Junque" will be advising ladies on how to turn old things lying around on the farm into useful, profitable items.

Two of the five homes on the tour will be featured in Lancaster Farming next week. They are the homes of Judy and Jack Stoltzfus and Mary and Roy Benner.

A brief description of each of the other three homes follows:

The first, that of Anna and Kenneth Skiles, is located in Narvon

The original stonehouse was built in 1734 and has been enlarged 5 times. The most recent addition was a modern kitchen added in 1972. Other points of interest include an Indian door, built in the corner cupboard, carved door trim and an indenture of 1787 when the farm was sold for a sum of 50 pounds. .The Skiles have four children: Jere, Michelle, Susan and Sara. Jere is living on an adjoining farm and farms in partnership with Ken Anna is nursing supervisor at Harrison House in Christiana.

Ken Skiles is a director of the Lancaster County Farmers' Association and a member of the state legislative committee.

The home of Joanne and Ken Hershey is located near Kinzers. This 1821 stonehouse was the original farmhouse. It has 8 small rooms completely refurbished.

The floor is oak, and a stone fireplace exists in the dirt floor basement.

The Hersheys have three children ages 13, 10 and 5.

They milk 70 Holstein cows and were recently featured in Farm and Ranch magazine.

The newest home included in the tour is that of Marion and Edwin Rohrer of Paradise.

The home was built in 1979 on the 100 acre dairy farm adjacent to the 200-year-old original stone farmhouse occupied by their son and daughter-in-law, Ed Jr. and Linda Edwin Sr. and Edwin Jr. farm in partnership

Marion used furnishings from the old home to decorate the new. Some pieces were handed down through the family. The living room is a blend of Victorian and 18th century decor with Williamsburg blue and white colors. The second floor was designed to host 10 - 12 overnight guests. The four bedrooms with two baths include a variety of antiques for others visiting to enjoy.

PRINCESS ANNE, Md — Traditional square dancing and Appalachian mountain clogging will be among the many attractions at the 34th annual Delmarva Chicken Festival, June 5 and 6, in Princess Anne, Maryland

The Agway DNI feeding program gives these hens the nutrients they need. And without wasting dollars.

The Agway Daily Nutrient Intake (DNI) feeding program gives your birds the nutrients they need for maximum production at the lowest possible cost. The simple and efficient DNI system prevents overfeeding of expensive protein while meeting your hens' daily requirements for amino acids and other nutrients

Today there s no need to put more nutrients in your bins than your hens need

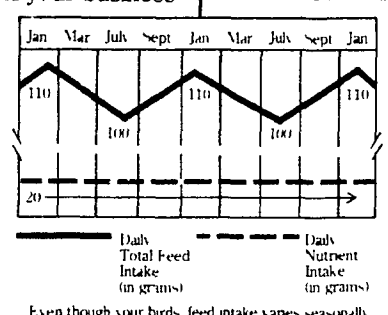
MAINTAINS A CONSTANT NUTRIENT LEVEL AS DAILY INTAKE CHANGES.

The idea behind the DNI program is simple: as feed intake varies, change feeds to avoid paying for more nutrition than your birds require

Suppose, for example, your flock is eating 100 grams of feed per bird daily (22 lbs /100 birds) Under the DNI program, your feed would be Agway High Layer 1000.

During cold weather, when the birds moved up to 110 grams of feed daily, you'd switch to High Layer 1100+ to maintain daily nutrient intake at the required level Paying for more protein than necessary can significantly affect the profitability of your business

By monitoring your flock's intake, you'll know when to change feeds (such as Agway High Layer 900 when birds are eating just 90 grams of feed/day, or High Layer 1100+ when birds are consuming 110 grams of feed/day).



Even though your birds' feed intake varies seasonally on the Agway DNI program nutrient intake remains constant provided you change feeds based on intake

YOUR AGWAY POULTRY SPECIALIST CAN HELP SET UP A DNI PROGRAM FOR YOUR OPERATION.

Agway Poultry Enterprise specialists are available to help you set up a DNI program for your operation You'll find that DNI is simple All you do is watch your birds' feed intake and adjust feeds accordingly

So contact your local Agway today for more details on the DNI program —the system that makes sure your birds get the nutrients they need without wasting dollars

BAI vets defend emergency plan

HARRISBURG — State veterinarians John Cable and Max VanBuskirk testified in front of the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board recently to inform all parties involved in the controversy of restarting the Unit 1 reactor at Three Mile Island about the Commonwealth's Disaster Operations Plan.

The Commonwealth's plan identifies the Department of Agriculture as the lead state agency, working with USDA, in guiding counties and agricultural communities in plans and actions in the event of radioactive contamination.

The plan was developed and published after TMI-2 and was revised this past February

In his testimony to the board on April 8, Dr Cable said, in the event of a nuclear emergency, the state has no plans for an overall evacuation of livestock found on the 90 to 95 farms within a 5 mile area of TMI The decision to evacuate would come from the Secretary of Agriculture

He pointed out the state has a network or agreement with USDA and other federal agencies for emergency animal disease control programs for any type of emergency

When asked if an animal that has been radiated poses a threat to the farmer or caretaker, Cable stated, "External ratiation to the animal would pose no threat to the farmer You may have particulate matter in the fur which could cause additional hazards to the farmer "

Concerning dairy cattle that might miss milkings if an accident involving Unit 1 should occur, Dr. VanBuskirk explained the udder of the cow would become congested for a few days, but gradually the fluids would be reabsorbed and the udder would become dry

Claims were made by area farmers that mastitis would result, along with other physical stress to the cattle (See front page story) These same farmers claimed the state's emergency plan is impractical

Responding to this contention, VanBuskirk stated, "The planned protective actions for livestock emphasize sheltering and the use of feed and water that has been protected from contamination

The guidance takes into consideration the tolerance livestock have to the effects of low level radiation and it minimizes exposure on the part of the farmer during the release of radioactive material "

The plan calls for coordination at the local level through the efforts of Extension personnel and advises farm operators to report their status and the status of livestock to them in case of an emergency

If the need to evacuate people from the area becomes necessary, VanBuskirk stated the Commonwealth can assist in arranging for livestock care And if the situation worsens, the evacuation of livestock would be made on a case to case basis

'...We will not attempt to evacuate immediately because of logistical problems and because of the problems related to confining disease to the original problem area," he said

"The mingling of livestock and sharing of equipment enroute to and at relocation sites increases the chances of exposure to dangerous transmissible diseases, like brucellosis, tuberculosis, mastitis and pseudorabies "

The plan calls for minimum exposure to radiation for both people and livestock through preparation. It suggests survival rations be stored in barns to keep livestock fed and watered for 48 hours And equipment and emergency generators should be located inside to prevent the farmer from having to be exposed to unnecessary risks

Fact sheets describe minimum ventilation needed for livestock to survive so windows and openings can be closed with bales of hay or sacks of grain, explained Robert Furrer, emergency management coordinator for PDA.

"If you continue to ventilate full blast with fans you'll be pulling everything in from the outside air, lessening the shielding provided by the barn," he said "There is always the risk of too little ventilation — the farmers must choose between the two risks, radiation or ventilation

Tables for radiation levels and their effects on livestock are listed in the plan starting at 500 rads, a measure of the radioactivity per unit of time According to Furrer, the radiation level during TMI-2 never reached 1 rad

Furrer said the assistance during a disaster depends on government and its responsibleness

Furrer and a PDA spokesman said after TMI-2, the Department visited farms in the area and listened to experiences and feelings of farmers and local veterinarians

"PDA is not pro or con for nuclear plants," Furrer concluded "Our interest is to have a plan in place if there is an emergency anywhere.

"Human life is our first priority with livestock second We do not equate livestock to human life in our planning effort I don't know anyone who would recommend we do "—SM

State plan

Lytle went on to testify that trying to move a herd like his would take from six to eight hours, "just to get loaded up and out of there "

The state's emergency plan, however, does not call for evacuating animals, necessarily, but provides recommendations on how the animals can be protected from the effects of radiation through housing

It suggests 'placing earth, hay, sacked feed or fertilizer, concrete blocks or other materials over and around exposed walls of barns and shelters to increase the radiation shielding effectiveness " It also rates the protection offered from various types of structures, from open sheds to bank barns

When asked if he would say it was practical, under any circumstances, to build a wall of hay or bags of feed to close in a barn big enough to house his cattle, numbering over 200, Lytle responded negatively

"It would take an army to move everything around," he said "Plus the animals would be in it just as fast as they can " He then called the Commonwealth's suggestions on sheltering impractical

Lytle explained his housing situation back at the farm is loose housing, a three-sided shed with an open front. The cattle have free-choice to go in or out

There is no means of closing the front," Lytle said. "And we use that as natural ventilation."

In commenting on the livestock's need for air, water, feed, and milking, Lytle expressed concern He testified that from missing a

40 years in extension service

Harry Sloat reviews 60 years in Lancaster County

BY CURT HARLER

LANCASTER — For 40 years the farmers of Lancaster saw Harry S Sloat on a weekly basis. But during the past 20 years, farmers have been more likely to ask, "What ever happened to Harry?"

The answer is simple nothing happened to Harry Sloat.

The former Lancaster County agricultural extension agent still lives right behind the Manor Shopping Center in a brick home as solid as his reputation as a farm leader

Although he has suffered what he describes as "ticker trouble," Harry makes only one concession to old age

"I've given up night driving," he explains

Until the recent retirement of Max Smith after 44 years, Harry Sloat held the state record for longevity among county agents

The Carbon County native relocated from Rockport, midway between Allentown and Wilkes-Barre, to Lancaster County in February 1921.

For 40 years, until his retirement in 1961, Sloat made his way around the county discussing poultry, tobacco, vegetables, fruit, and field crops with Lancaster farmers

First it was in a Ford, later in a Dodge, finally in a Chevy, that he toured the farmland of Lancaster County

He made his most lasting mark in farm managment programs Even today farmers regularly discuss how Harry Sloat taught them bookkeeping or got them started on a particular record keeping program

But as Harry spins stories of his past as an extension agent, it quickly becomes apparent that Lancaster County almost didn't have a Harry Sloat in its extension service more times than one

Harry Sloat had enrolled in Penn State and was to be graduated in 1919. At the time he was in the Reserve Officers Training Corps

"When World War II — I mean World War I — broke out, I dropped out of college to serve," he recalls.

That was in the Fall of 1917

Only days before he was due to be shipped overseas he came down with a deathly bout of the flu

By the time he recovered the hostilities had ended and Harry was on his own again.

He got a job as a chemist running tests on lead and zinc oxide for a plant near his home.

While working he fell victim to an industrial accident and his legs were severely burned. The damage was so bad the physicians wanted to amputate his leg

But Harry Sloat had other plans. He wanted to join a Masonic Lodge, and the Masons would not accept a person missing limbs.

With a great deal of assistance from a French doctor, Sloat recovered.

"I decided college was better than what I'd been through," he says.

He returned to Penn State, and in February 1921 he received his degree in horticulture.

Harry Sloat started working with Lancaster County farmers a few days before he received his B.S. from Penn State College, as it was known then.

His blue-grey eyes flash from behind gold framed glasses as he recalls the early days of extension work in the county.

"Bucher and I used to go out to farms and see problems first-hand," he says, referring to long-time county agent Dutch Bucher.

"We didn't use radio or TV programs then," he continues.

Sloat seems resigned to the mass media contacts made by county agents today, but that doesn't mean he has to like them.

Still, he used the media himself. For the last several years he was in extension he did an article every Friday for the Lancaster New Era, covering farm or 4-H happenings.

It was under Dutch Bucher that he got his first promotion, from area farm management specialist to assistant county agent

But there were troubles working with Dutch. As most oldtimers remember, Dutch Bucher always ran around the county on his motorcycle. When Dutch needed help with a talk or demonstration, Harry would be drafted into riding along in the cycle's sidecar.

"It was between Quarryville and Kirkwood, one day, that we came around a sharp curve a bit too fast. He lifted the third wheel right off the ground.

"I thought I was going to go through the fence head first," Harry recalls. But Bucher got the cycle back on track and the extension service was saved the burden of hiring a whole new ag staff

There was a thinner extension staff then, Sloat recalls.

"For years before my retirement on February 1, 1961 Bucher and I were doing all the farm work. There was a home economist and her assistant, and that was our whole staff," he says

He looks with some amazement at a recent brochure which shows twice as many extension directors and nearly three times the staff today as what he and Dutch had to work with Harry's mind shifts gears for a moment.

"You know, Dutch had a girl in Kansas he used to tell me about. Said they came really close to getting married.

"But then he moved away from there, became ill down South, and lost touch. They never did get married," Harry concludes.

For Sloat, though, there was a woman to share the years.

"Emma Carey and I originally were in classes together back in 1919," he recalls. "Psychology, I believe "

As fate would have it, the two never dated at Penn State

"I ran across her teaching at Lampeter," he continues.

The ag teacher at Lampeter used to be strong on eggs Sloat, long remembered for his ties to the county poultry business, naturally was involved in egg activities.

"I'd help Roy B. Herr and the other poultrymen get together their exhibit. Several years they won the medal for the largest and best exhibit at the Farm Show," he remembers.

Herr, of course, was president of the Poultry Association for about 15 years, following Harry Metzler who was the group's first president.

"Anyway, I ran into her again when she was teaching at Lampeter. Now, Pappy Gibbs who had an ice cream plant, and some others of us would go dancing every Tuesday evening.

"I took Emma to a couple of those dances and we just kept on going," Harry says

Emma's brother Charles taught vo-ag at Lampeter for a few years and then moved to York County as supervisor. Now he is retired in Williamsport.

Lancaster Sure Crop was the corn variety to beat in those days

"I remember at one demonstration near Strasburg we had an 18-foot tall Mexican line that was [illegible] for silage

"It was so high you had to reach up to touch the ear," Harry says, reaching high over his head for emphasis

Hybrid varieties eventually made the old lines obsolete. Meanwhile, the age of chemicals was arriving.

"In the late 30s we started a program to spray for spittlebug," Harry says.

One of the first demonstrations was on a farm below Kirkwood.

Sloat went out to the farm with Penn State specialist John Pepper. Pepper, Sloat recalls, was a bit reluctant to make the drive because he doubted there would be much farmer interest.

"When we got there we saw cars parked along the road for a mile and a half," Harry recalls.

By the next summer a lot of fellows had rigged up sprayers and in a short time the practice of spraying alfalfa became common

In those days, Sloat says, a specialist from the College would be through the county every 10 days or two weeks.

There was Elmer Pfeifer or Jim Eakin to talk about agronomy. John Pepper would be through to look at disease or insect problems.

"In between times, I'd send out personal letters to farmers to help with their problems. Now they send out these books," he says holding up an Orchard Managment book and an Agronomy Guide, "and the farmers come in for meetings."

4-H activities kept agents busy At that time the youth club was everyone's responsibility.

"We used to be out every night to a 4-H club meeting, except Saturday and Sunday Now club leaders do that work," he says.

Sloat continues to talk slowly, remembering how things were. Money, then as now, was a constant worry

"Mrs Collins McSparren and I were delegated to see the County Commissioners for the extension appropriation," he says

Getting dollars to support the ag extension program then, as now, was a major undertaking.

He remembers one particular commission chairman as "a politician and much the tightwad "

But with a great deal of coaxing the pair managed to get the county appropriation doubled from $5000 to $10,000.

"That was for all expenses, staff, office space and the rest," Harry emphasizes, noting today's budget has grown but still represents a challenge to extension leaders

Even newcomers to the County can remember when there was no modern Farm and Home Center to support agricultural activities

But how many can remember walking into the office where Harry Sloat first started his work, the one out East Orange Street in Lancaster?

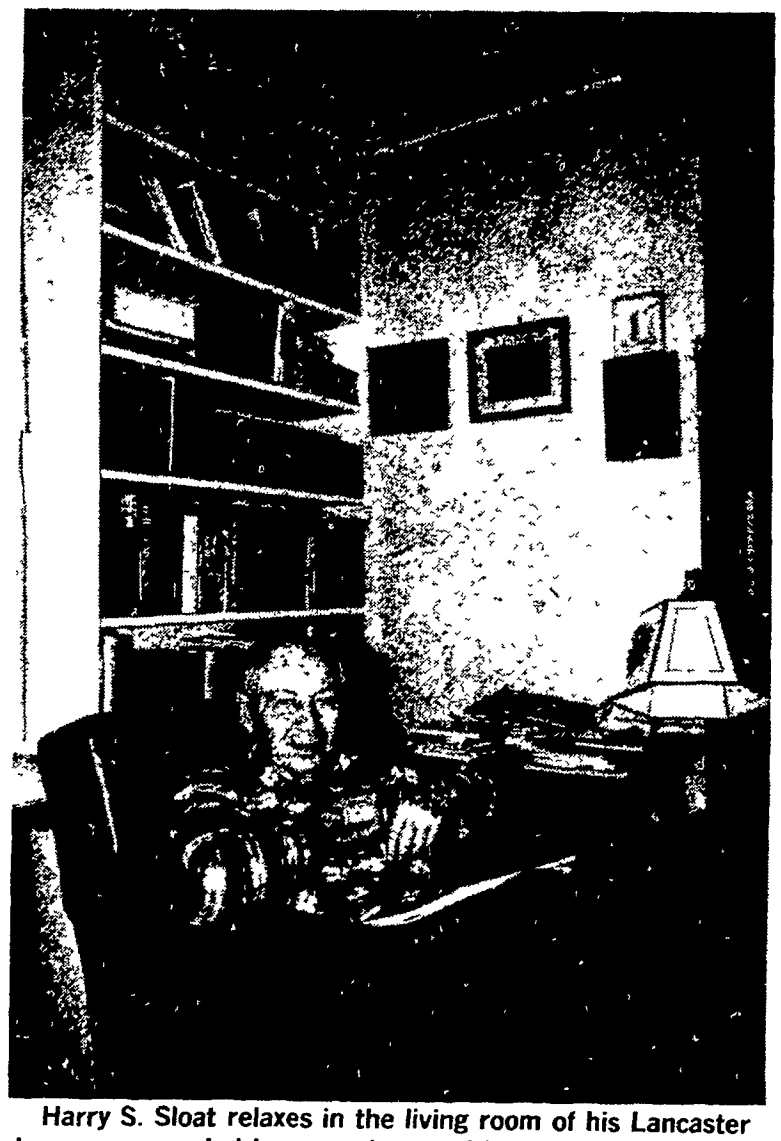
From there the extension office was moved to the top of the Woolworth Building near the square in Lancaster, and later to the second floor of the Post Office Building.

"At the Post Office there was no charge for rent," Harry notes with apparent glee.

Harry Sloat took calls at all of those locations, and notes that it often would be 2 p.m. before he could slip out to eat lunch.

He says with some surprise that he still gets calls and requests for information at home.

"Memory doesn't hold up as good as it used to," he says just before spouting off names and lists of places, like the recent fruit and poultry meetings he attended



Harry S. Sloat relaxes in the living room of his Lancaster home, surrounded by magazines and books--many of which are Yearbooks of Agriculture or plant and garden volumes.

Last Monday, for example, he and J Wilbur Houser of Lampeter went to the beekeepers and fruitgrowers meeting.

During the 60 years he has travelled Lancaster County roads, Harry Sloat has seen thousands of changes — some for the good, some not so good.

"There is a crying need for more work to be done on soil conservation," he says.

'We need help to keep industry and housing from enroaching on good farmland Look at the Manheim Pike, or around Mount Joy, or along the Lincoln Highway," he says.

Since his early days in Lancaster County, except in the Eastern parts where the Amish and Pike Mennonite have been; farms have become totally mechanized, he points out.

Big dairymen with 25 cows now have 90 to 100 They ship to giant co-ops rather than to local dairies, he continues

Confinement feeding of swine and cattle is fairly common.

Poultry and broiler industry expansion has pretty well covered the whole county.

"All of that has helped keep Lancaster in front of the non-irrigated counties in the United States," he emphasizes.

He also throws in a pitch for Eastern products.

"Eaten any of those Washington apples?" he asks. "They may produce color out West with all that sunshine and irrigation.

But their apples have little or no flavor. If I want apples, I want Eastern apples," he says.

Harry pauses for a moment to check on his wife.

She had an aneurism of the brain some time ago and underwent five hours surgery.

"She has had problems," he says."It falls to me to do the work around here."

Returning to the room he speculates on how Lancaster County's farms will fare during the coming 60 years

"If I'd be able to come back to Lancaster County and look at agriculture I'd like to see lower, stable interest rates.

"There has to be a retrenchment and balancing of budgets for farmers as well as the government if they both are going to keep from going bankrupt," he declares.

"I hope we can continue to adjust to things and then we'll succeed," he says.

Harry Sloat still can't get over how people remember him

When he worked as agent he was honored many times. One in particular he recalls was an award presented in New York's Waldorf Astoria hotel for helping farmers use pest control materials.

He has a folder of over 100 letters given him upon his retirement. He still looks through them now and then.

"You'd be surprised at the calls and questions I get at times. I seem to have reached the farmers more personally than some do today," Harry muses.

With all the years spent in agriculture, Harry Sloat can't keep far from the soil.

His garden is lush with rhododendron, magnolia, bridal wreath, and roses.

He takes a few quick, short steps to show his visitor to the door. "It's amazing they still remember," he says.

No, that's not amazing — the surprising thing about Harry S. Sloat is that he doesn't expect people to remember him.

stating. I wonder, doesn't Mr. Fasnacht realize this?

And when I write the Commission confiscates land, examining these facts should convince even a skeptic.

Sometime prior to 1975 the County of Schuylkill wished to sell a parcel of land to the highest bidder. Not so, said the Commission, citing a 1910 Law. The County Court ruled the County had the right to sell the land to the highest bidder. The Commission appealed. The Commonwealth Court upheld the County Court's decision and the land was sold to a private party for $93,000 instead of less than ¼ that amount which the Commission had bid.

No wonder Schuylkill County is in debt several million. Perhaps they've sold or given too much land to the Commission.

One must wonder about Mr. Fasnacht, since he does not seem to remember. However most Berks and Lancaster Countians have not forgotten the confiscation at both Middle Creek and Blue Marsh, by the Commission.

My indignation and contempt almost go beyond the bounds of control when such fabrication and distortions are presented in the statement. The Game Commissions acquisition program is predicated on a basis of a willing seller to a willing buyer. Is that So?

It is this writer's opinion these actions are less than one step away from Communism. My dictionary defines Communism as private property being abolished.

The Commission's land acquisition policies remind me of an American reporter and his Red counterpart discussing Communism. Said the American, "The way I understand Communism you divide everything you have with your neighbor."

"Not quite', said the Red Reporter. "You have your neighbor divide everything he has with you."

Some of the projects and policies of the Game Commission are excellent and to their credit, but their land acquisition program and their favored treatment of certain groups leave much to be desired.

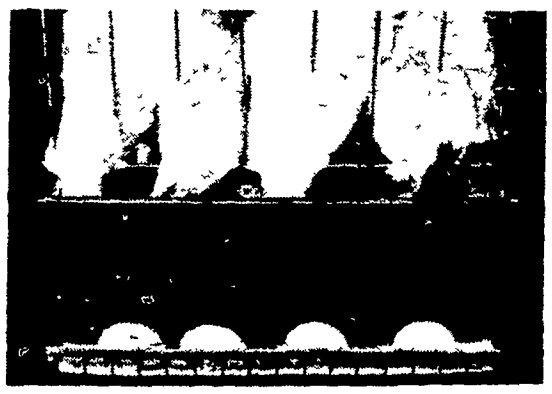
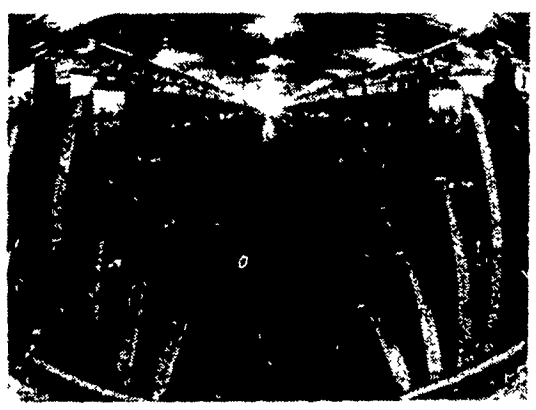
REVERSE CAGE LAYER SYSTEM



LESS BIRD STRESS

The system has been designed for bird comfort!

Each bird has her place at the feed trough Each has easy access to water Obstruction to light and the flow of air have been greatly reduced, providing more uniform ventilation and lighting for every bird. Combined with Chore-Time's automatically controlled air inletting system, you get a layer house environment designed for bird comfort and the resulting better production



Not only the physical shape of the feed trough, but the operation of the feeder has been engineered to reduce feed waste. The trough shape cuts down on feed loss from "raking" and "billing," while the feeder has been specifically designed for Chore-Time's programmed and performance feeding concept

★ LET US SHOW YOU A REVERSE CAGE SYSTEM IN OPERATION

CHORE-TIME

The Air System With A Mind Of Its Own

Until now, most ventilation systems had one drawback. Air inlets had to be opened and closed by hand.

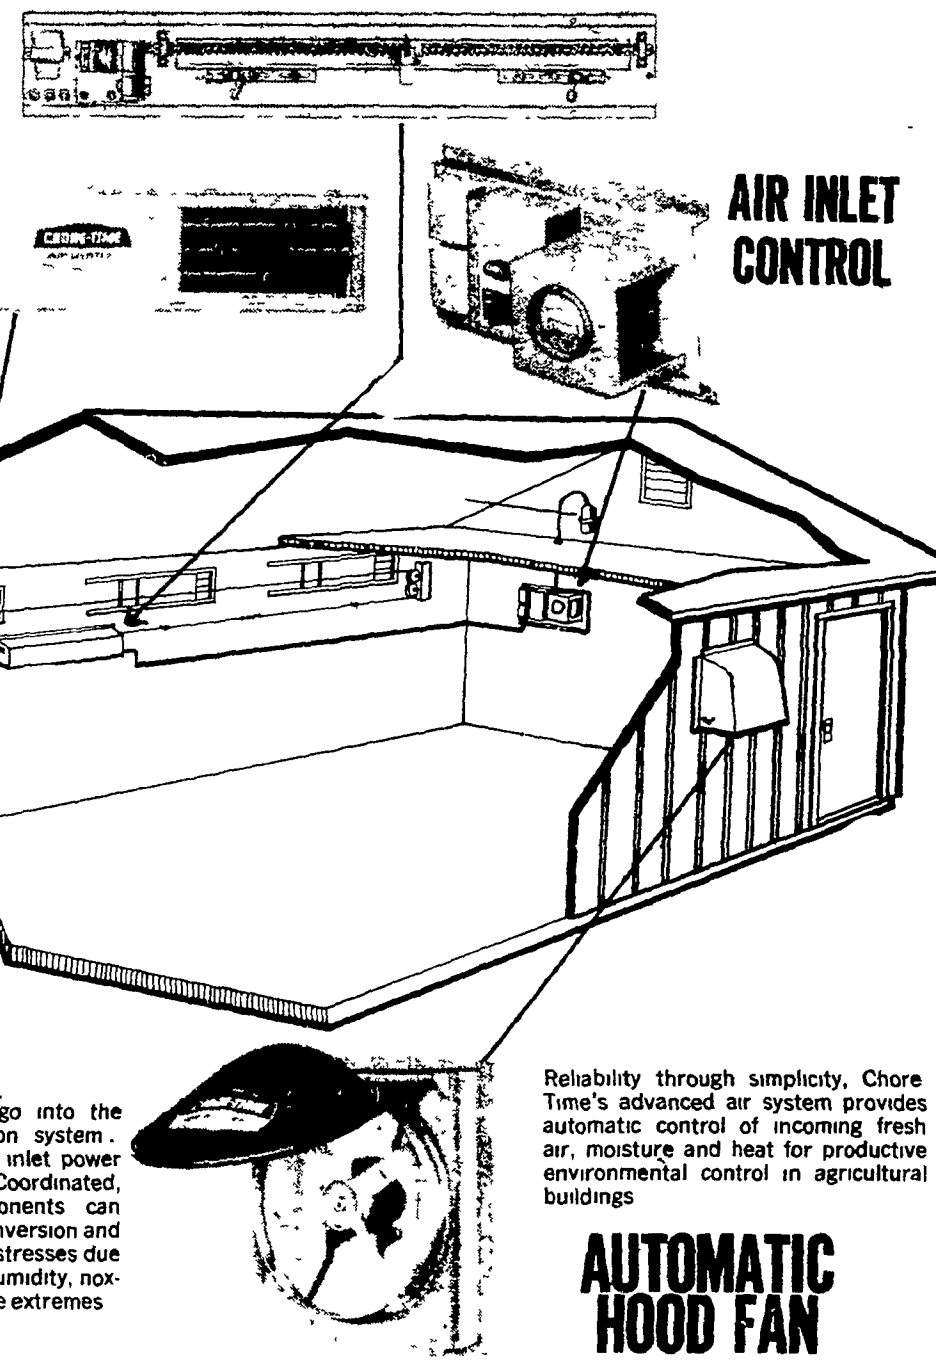
This was time consuming — and pretty much a matter of guesswork.

Now, Chore-Time has eliminated this problem.

The Chore-Time system has a mind of its own and adjusts inlets — in conjunction with fan operation — to maintain air pressure at a constant, preset level.

This provides a degree of air and moisture accuracy never before possible in poultry and livestock buildings.

The new inlet control (pictured) is just one of many exclusive features that make Chore-Time air systems number one in performance and reliability



Four basic components go into the makeup of this ventilation system. the fan, the inlet, the air inlet power pack, and the controls Coordinated, these four basic components can provide you with better conversion and performance by removing stresses due to lack of oxygen, excess humidity, noxious gases and temperature extremes

Reliability through simplicity, Chore Time's advanced air system provides automatic control of incoming fresh air, moisture and heat for productive environmental control in agricultural buildings

NEBA delegates hold annual meeting

HAZLETON — "My impressions of the NEBA Cooperative is that it's a vibrant and growing organization. It has a sound financial picture and meeting all obligations to remain a stable cooperative," said Sire Power and NEBA General Manager, DuWayne A. Kutz.

Approximately 150 voting delegates, guests, directors, and personnel attended the seventeenth NEBA Annual Meeting, recently held at the Gus Genetti Motor Lodge in Hazelton

General Manager Kutz was a principle speaker at the meeting. "We have programs to be pround of, and to progress in, for the 1980's and 1990's," said Kutz.

He discussed the young sire program at Sire Power and stressed how it is the obligation of the membership to continue to sample young bulls.

NEBA President, Gary Rickard reported another great financial year. "The net operating margin before patronage income was the largest ever in the history of the NEBA organization," said Rickard

Rickard said, "The future of the cooperative looks bright."

John M. White, professor of dairy science at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, was the feature speaker His presentation was titled "Looking Ahead In The Eighties."

White speculated on things he believes will happen, and things that might happen, in the next decade of the dairy industry.

"Farmers can't afford to get behind in the fast moving dairy industry today," said White. "Managing a successful breeding program is especially important."

White pointed out how accuracy has been improved in calculating the Predicted Difference figures.

"New traits being calculated are calving ease, proteins/solids factor, and research is being done on susceptability of mastitis," said White.

"Between 1973-1980, the bulls sampled in A.I. tripled," said White.

He also told the diaryman how the development of embryo transfer has become a practical reality in the 1980's For this progressive development White reflected on how the 1970's showed a significant shift in evaluating pedigrees for performance and productivity.

White continued with a few things he is certain will happen in the 1980's

-The DHIA program will definitely see a change because of the tremendous increase of people on test The options may be bi-monthly or AM-PM testing White pointed out that salaries are going to have to increase for DHIA supervisors to make a living.

-According to White, the current scale for type classification is "awful". "There is a real need for an equal distance scale for evaluating genetic type accurately, he said. The difference between a 65 and 66 point cow can't be considered the same as the difference between an 86 and 87 point cow."

-Cow Index and milk composition has progressed tremendously. Improvements has been made in the BLUP Procedure as well as in evaluation of selection.

-The genetic base must change to be current and up to date with the dairy industry

-There will be a better selection of bulls and more triple plus bulls. This can be attributed to a successful sampling program in the A.I. industry.

Looking ahead to the '80's, White reminded the group that Embryo Transfer was in its infancy stage. The research for cloning embryos is going on right now.

White said, "We must manage and monitor embryo transfer so we don't' degenerate the dairy industry. Each breed organization must develop its own guide lines for ET and cloning procedures.

"The danger of Embryo Transfer and cloning will narrow the genetic base," he said. "Inbreeding becomes a problem."

In conclusion, some things that White believes won't happen include the sexing of semen and determining the genetic value of newborn calves.

White passed on advice to remain flexible in thinking and become an early adapter. He said adopt new technology and go with it.

"Keep up to date; read Hoard's Dairyman, read your breed and dairy management magazines, and most important, learn how to learn and continue to learn," White concluded.

Margin Stout, NEBA Sales and Service Director reported the past year's activities, accomplishments, and statistics of the technician force. He congratulated and thanked the District Managers; Leighton Klingler, Willard Odenwelder, and Bob Parr, and all the technicians for another successful year.

The NEBA Board of Directors were elected as follows. President-Gary Rickard; Vice President-John Epler; and Treasurer-William Terhune. These men, plus Harold Lesher, make up the Executive Committee.

Also elected were Secretary-Margin Stout; Assistant Secretary-Henry Schragger; and Assistant Treasurer-Laura Klimas. The following Directors were elected. Hank Rudderow, Cliff Sands, Ray McMillen, Sterling Fabian, Gerald Parker, and James Howard.

Produce dealer ineligible

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — A Rhode Island firm, Al-Jacs, Inc., of Providence, has become ineligible to operate in the produce industry under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act as a result of its failure to pay a reparation award of $7467.

The award had been issued by USDA in favor of a Connecticut shipper for potatoes shipped between February and April, 1980 The firm was given an opportunity to answer the charges but failed to respond, and USDA ordered payment of the amount claimed.

The firm may not operate industry under the PACA until the award has been paid. The firm's officers, directors, and major stockholders–Albert R. Jacavone, Albert J. Jacavone and Antonette Jacavone–may not be employed by or affiliated with any PACA licensee without USDA approval.

Charles Brader, an official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the act provides for damages to be paid by those who fail to meet their contractual obligations in buying and selling fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables. He said interstate traders must be licensed, and the law requires that their licenses be suspended if they fail to pay reparation awards single milking during the Agnes Flood of 1972, mastitis increased in his herd To get all his cows milked each day would take 32 man hours, he figured, an enormous task for one person in the event of a nuclear accident. He was more optomistic about survival chances of the cattle without water and food, stating they might last two weeks but would take at least a year to recover from the effects.

When asked if he made any changes to the shelters on his farm since TMI-2, Lytle said "no." Reacting to the question of whether he would follow an evacuation order in the event of another accident or defy the order and stay with his herd, Lytle said, "I would have to weigh my family or the herd and decide at that time which would be best."

Lytle also stated no one contacted him after TMI-2 for inputs to the state emergency plan.

The Middletown farmer's sentiments were echoed for the most part by two brothers, Jeremiah K. Fisher and Vance Fisher, R3 Etters.

If an emergency was declared at the plant (TMI-1), which is 3½ miles from my home, I would leave my cattle, although they and my farm represent my total real assets, since my primary concern would be for my family

"During the TMI-2 accident, I evacuated my family to a place 50 miles away, and I returned once a day to care for the livestock. My livestock are fed outside, so they were not protected from radiation. My animals also are pastured.

"I do not believe that we will be given the truth, and if there is a bad accident that there will be time to take action to protect our animals

"Lack of plans to evacuate livestock of farmers who live close to the TMI plant will make it impossible to save the livestock in case of a real disaster We may lose our lives in trying to return to care for our animals."

Fisher stated he also has open housing for his dairy cattle. He said he plans no alterations to his buildings.

Brother Vance Fisher, who keeps about 15 to 25 beef cattle on his 160 acre farm testified that the nuclear generating plant has had an impact on his herd's health.

We have had a problem of paralysis starting in 1975, possibly 1976. We had our veterinarian there He has never been able to determine the cause. He has treated five animals for me, which have died Neighbors have lost a considerable number of animals

"Back in the winter of 1978-79, the Food and Drug Administration authorized feeding selenium to animals I studied up on it and I found that was our problem We were lacking in selenium.

"Selenium is a mineral which is necessary to the body functions, same as iron, calcium, and so on."

Fisher said he linked the selenium deficiency to the clorine emitted from the reactor, causing a chemical reaction in the soil.

"Although the problem has been identified, we are not satisfied that the explanation is complete. We feel that the plant is to blame, however we would have a hard time proving our case.

"I am not satisfied that the planning done for livestock in case there would be an accident at the nuclear plant is correct or sufficient.

Veterinarians Dr Robert Weber, Mechanicsburg and Dr. Lawrence Samples, Hummelstown both cited areas where the state plan appears impractical — ventilation and water storage.

Agronomist advises plant some early corn

NEWARK, Del — "There's an obvious danger in offering advice when its value hinges on the weather. But when it turns dry, we'll try anything," says University of Delaware extension agronomist William Mitchell.

"I'm referring to the current low level of soil moisture and what we can do to make sure this water is used most effectively on our crops," he says.

Recent rains have brought 0.5 to over three inches of water to various parts of the region. Though this hasn't contributed much to subsoil moisture, it has restored surface moisture. The best way to hold onto this water until it's needed by crops is to disturb the soil as little as possible.

As soon as the ground is plowed or disked, the drying process begins As water evaporates from the surface of worked soil, more water moves up to take its place and the process is repeated.

"With hundreds of acres to make ready for planting, I can appreciate the uneasiness about delaying tillage," says the specialist. "But to make the best use of water, tillage operations should be kept to a minimum."

Many fields have been prepared and are just waiting to be planted. During the first week of April soil temperatures at seed depth were nearing good temperatures for planting corn

Everything points to an early spring and in the long run, high yields are made by early planted corn, he says.

A few fields planted now will provide a hedge against drought and heat stress at pollination time. This corn will pollinate in late June, well in advance of the highest summer temperatures that usually arrive during the third week in July.

A little planted fertilizer such as 8-24-9, DAP, MAP or 10-34-0 will help the corn to establish rapidly and it may advance the silking date even further, says Mitchell.

Use a full-season hybrid and take advantage of the long days of spring.

Twin calves born 17 days apart

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

RED LION — An old Angus cow with a brand new calf and no milk to feed it might tempt most beef producers to make a quick trip to the auction

"My herdsman, Sylvester 'Boss' Rittenhouse, told me we might as well sell her for beef, since she still wasn't milking anything for two weeks," Ross Manifold remembers.

Manifold, who keeps 15 Angus cows on his 66-acre farm at R2 Red Lion, was reluctant to load up the 16-year-old ailing Angus for the haul to market. After all, she'd regularly produced a calf all those years, and her age wasn't really showing

Still, the fact remained the cow had no milk for the calf, and showed no interest in even trying to eat her grain, after dropping the 30-pound heifer calf on October 24 Within a few days, the calf had looked so hollow and seemed so hungry the Manifold began bucket feeding.

For two weeks, the cow barely picked at her feed, spending most of her time just moping on the straw bedding

"But by November 7, she started to eat a little better She still didn't have any milk though "

Manifold continued to be puzzled over the condition of the reliable old brood cow.

On the morning of November 10, 17 days later Manifold walked to the barn to check on the sick cow and found the last thing he expected.

She'd delivered a second calf during the night.

This new arrival was a bull, and was also small, weighing no more than 30 pounds.

And, finally, the cow had come into milk. It wasn't in sufficient quantity to satisfy both calves, so Manifold continued to supplement both with bucket feedings

Manifold believes that the two calves resulted from separate breedings, rather than a twinning.

His veterinarian, Dr. George Hartenstein of York, says such an occurrence could happen if one of the cow's ovaries had been impregnated, and against the normal cycle of nature, an egg had been released by the second ovary, and was fertilized.

Even more unusual would be the carrying to full term of two such separately conceived calves

"I don't know that anyone has ever done any statistical research on this, but the odds would have to be astronomical," Hartenstein says

He adds that in 40 years of veterinarian practice, this double pregnancy is a one-of-a-kind occurrence

Both calves, and recuperated mother, are doing well and have not been turned out to pasture with the rest of the herd, following a winter of confinement to the barn.

Manifold kept the calves on supplemental feedings until they were six weeks old, and constructed a special creep feeder where they could get their regular ration of corn chop with a topping of commercial complete calf feed.

Still nursing the pair of calves, the cow is bred back and again due to freshen in November

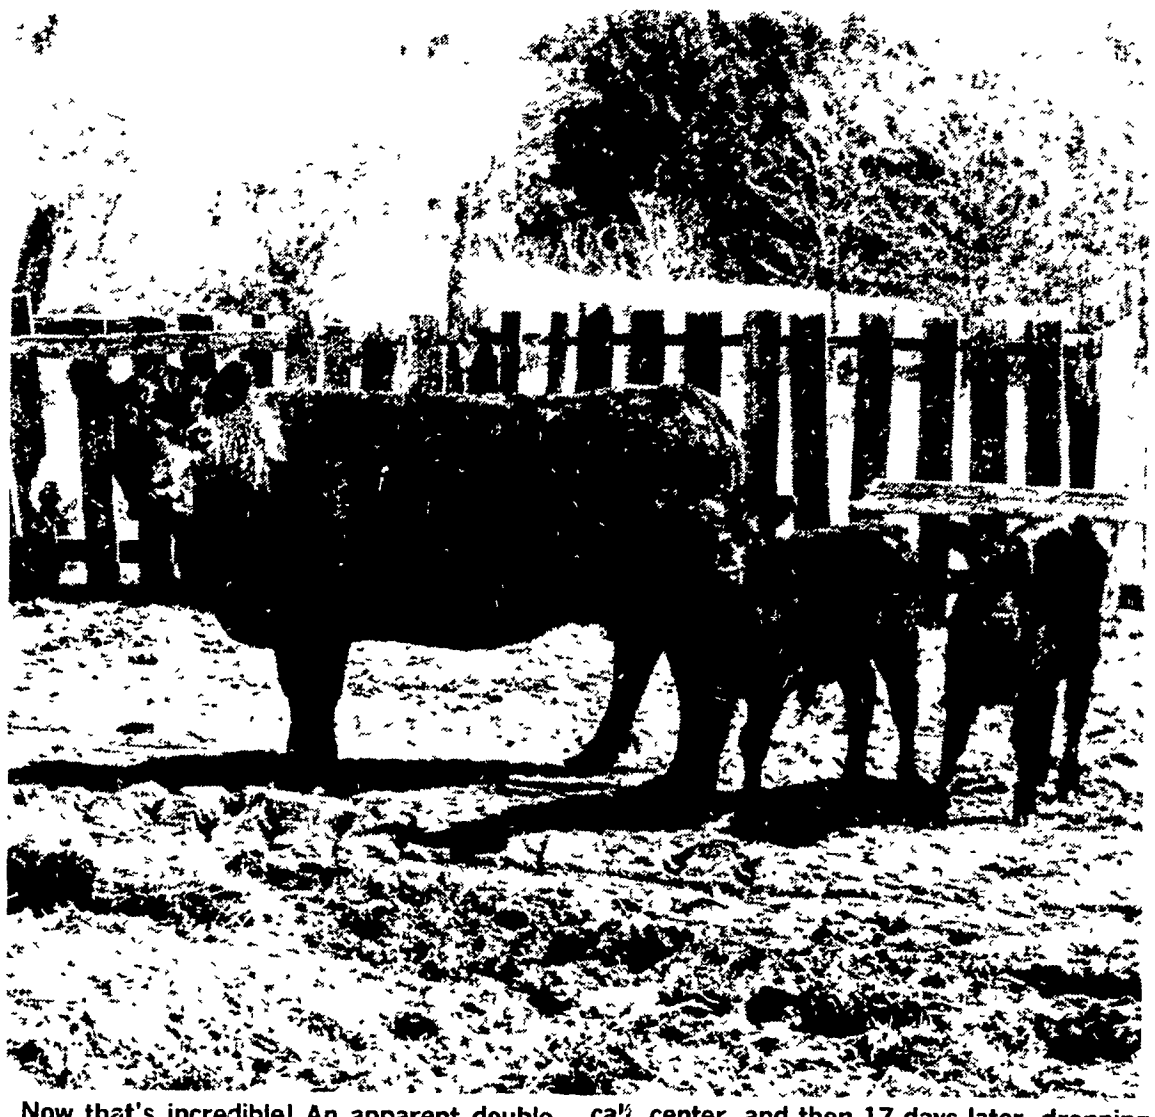
What surprise she might hold in store this time is anyone's guess.

A twin herself, the cow is from one of four that Manifold purchased over twenty years ago from neighbor Lee Poorbaugh. He ventured into Angus beef mostly as a hobby for the farm he'd purchased on Freysville Road, after moving from his former home at Sunnyburn.

Longevity seems to be a trait of these Angus, since one of Manifold's original purchases remained productive in his herd for twenty years.

Manifold suspected that his cow's delivery of two calves was exceedingly rare after viewing a segment of the television show, "That's Incredible." That sequence was based on the story of a woman who gave birth to two babies with timing similar to the Angus cow.

Manifold is retired after 40 years with the American Chain and Cable Company in York. Between raising angus, and tending his farm chores, he's taken an active role in the Red Lion chapter of the American Association of Retired People, and serves as their president



Now that's incredible! An apparent double pregnancy of Ross Manifold's 16-year-old Angus cow resulted in her dropping a bull calf, center, and then 17 days later, dropping a heifer, right. Although small at birth, the pair is growing well.

Adams County selects 1981 apple queen

BY M.H. GITT
Staff Correspondent

BENDERSVILLE — Over 100 people braved thunderstorms to see Angie Sheaffer, 17, of Biglerville selected as the 1981 Adams County Apple Queen Saturday evening. She will be crowned May 3 during the Apple Blossom Sunday festivities which will be held at the South Mountain Fairgrounds

"Terrific. It just feels terrific" exclaimed Sheaffer on how it feels to be the new country apple queen.

She had other reasons to be happy because her younger sister, Missy, was chosen the Second Runner-up in the contest.

"When they named her as the second runner-up, I was so happy I could have just jumped up and kissed her," Angie said.

The five foot five, Biglerville High School senior, noted that among her favorite activities and hobbies are sewing, reading, crocheting, gardening, meeting new people, spending time with her family, being outdoors, and working on the farm

She has a lot of the latter because she works on both grandparents' farms as well as her father's farm

Her chores include, "Just about anything that has to be done from slopping the hogs to picking the fruit"

When asked during the contest what she would do if selected to be the county's apple queen she answered, "I'd go to all the schools and tell the children about apples and how good they are for you and then I go to fairs and before private organizations and tell them about the nutritional value of apples.

The brown eyed, brown hair student plans to attend the Southern Seminary Junior College in Virginia, where she will major in Business Management and Merchandising. Her goal is to work in an office where she will enjoy her work and meet new people.

The First Runner-up was Laurie Roth, 17, a student at Fairfield High School, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Philip Roth of Fairfield, Second Runner-up Missy Sheaffer, 16, also a student at Biglerville High School, daughter of Terry J and Connie Sheaffer, of Biglerville

The other girls participating in the 26th Annual Apple Queen Contest were: — Kathy Jo Asper, 16, Biglervilley High School, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Asper, Aspers; —Sara Muniz, 17, Bermudian Springs High School, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Carlos Muniz, Gardeners;

—Michele Elaine Showers, 16, Biglerville High School, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Showers, Aspers;

—Joyce Starner, 17, Biglerville High School, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Myles Starner, Aspers;

The current Adams County Apple Queen, Tami Lobaugh, 18, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Leonard Lobaugh, is a freshman at Millersville State College majoring in Medical Technology, and has spent the past year promoting apples throughout the county and the state. She gave a short speech in which she noted that when she first won the title, she though it was going to be a glamorous, but "it was a lot of work and traveling." and thanked everyone who supported her including her "parents, family, people in the fruit growers association and her chaperones."

The master of ceremonies for the contest was C David Redding, a local auctioneer and farmer The judges were Patricia Huff, Extension Service Home Economist for Dauphin County, Silvio Guisti, president of the corporation that owns Alva Restaurant in Harrisburg, and John F. Allison, Assistant Superintendent of the Northern York County School District. Entertainment was provided by John Weaner who sang a number of songs accompanied on the piano by Irene Tracy

DHIA outlines expansion

UNIVERSITY PARK — A report on the steady growth and expansion of the Pennsylvania DHIA program was outlined at a recent meeting of the group's board of directors.

Currently on test in 1981 are a total of 5,876 herds and some 316,740 cows. These figures represent an increase of about 6.5 percent in the number of herds on test over last year and a hike of 8.2 percent in the number of cows.

A summary of growth over the past five years, from 1976 to 1981, shows a 21 percent increase in the number of herds and a 28 percent increase in the number of cows.

The Five-Year Outlook Committee also took a future glance at the expected continuing DHIA expansion. The group forecasts that by 1986 it is expected that 60 percent of the cows in the state will be on test. Presently, about 40 percent of the cows in the state are on test. In Lancaster County, the figures stand at about 50 percent.

In other matters, the directors approved a change in the handling of tank samples. Now, only one tank sample per herd will be accepted each month, with a $2.00 charge for milk, fat and-or protein test and $2.00 for the somatic cell count test.

Farmers will also need to provide a stamped self-addressed postcard or envelope in order to receive a tank sample test report.

Also, the printing of the old-style, hand-written life history sheet has been discontinued. Effective, July 1, there will be provided a new computer-issued individual cow record of identification, progeny and lifetime production. The new material will be the same size and contain the same information, but just be issued in a different form.

In addition to the election of new officers for one year, two new directors were seated, including Nelson Stoltzfus, of Chester County, representing the Southeast Region; and John Piwowar, of Fayette County, representing the Southwestern Region.

Officers for the coming year are Ellis Denlinger, Gordonville, treasurer; Jay Howes, Warriors Mark, secretary; J. Robert Kindig, Conestoga, vice president, and Oliver Butler, Wellsboro, president.

The group also reviewed new laboratory equipment and heard a report on the National DHIA Convention.

Study says Pennsylvania faces food supply crisis

EMMAUS — In cooperation with Lt. Governor William Scranton, representatives of Rodale's Press' Cornucopia Project will release a study April 21st showing that Pennsylvania is facing critical problems in the state's food-supply system.

The study will be released at a news conference to be held at the Media Center in the State Capitol Building in Harrisburg, (fifth floor) on Tuesday, April 21st, at 11:30 a.m. Present will be Lt. Governor Scranton, Robert Rodale and several of the principal writers of the food system report.

Rodale Press, based in Emmaus, Pennsylvania, has been studying the nation's food supply system through its Cornucopia Project.

Pennsylvania's Three Top Alfalfa Producers

Champion growers Norman and Harold Davis of Huntingdon, owners of Daland Farms, and Apollo variety alfalfa from RP Seeds.

When Harold and Norman Davis entered the 1980 State Alfalfa Growers Program, they knew the competition would be tough, that it would take a lot to win first place. A lot of yield... pounds of protein... and TDN produced over the entire growing season.

That meant careful planning, proper management and a little luck with the weather. Plus the best alfalfa stand on their entire dairy operation.

The Davis brothers' choice to win? A two-year old field of Apollo, the alfalfa variety bred to beat Phytophthora root rot ("wet foot" disease) and deliver high yields of consistently top quality hay.

The result: Apollo yielded 8.6 tons per acre, with 3,410 pounds of protein and 9,765 pounds of TDN.

And Harold and Norman Davis won first place to become Pennsylvania's 1980 State Champion alfalfa growers.

PFA policy supports that action, although not the previous two changes.

Outgoing House Ag Chairman Roy W. Wilt requested the public hearing to give farmers a chance to speak out on the issue No date was set for the hearing.

"We feel the sole right to vote in a mandatory advertising program should be in the hands of the individual farmer, and not the executive board of some organization," said PFU Legislative Chairman Jack Philson, R4 Mercer

But Milk Marketing, Inc.'s John Walker told lawmakers there is no need for change. "The present law is adequate," he said.

Inter-State Director Daniel Martin, Manheim, delivered a strongly worded statement against HB 767 to the Committee.

"If there is something wrong with block voting, then there is something wrong with our entire representative system of government," he said.

Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell, on the Hill to push for an administrative measure to consolidate 14 existing food laws into one law, said he hopes the legislature, in considering HB 767, will act in the best interest of all farmers

"We are going to urge our membership to write to the Ag Committee to get this bill passed," said Farmers Union's James J Graci.

Welfare reform tied up the legislators this week and will be back on the calendar next week, too.

But once the welfare package is taken care of farmers likely will see action on HB 143, the ag areas bill

HB 143 is on the calendar for third reading, but probably will be held back until the welfare package—a strongly partisan issue—is resolved

Washington lawmakers, meantime, are sorting out several measures introduced in the U.S Senate for consideration in determining the 1981 Farm Bill

SB 943, the Reagan Administration's version of the Farm Bill, was introduced by Jesse Helms. But the Southern Senator already had indicated where his feelings lie last Tuesday when he introduced his own Farm Bill, SB 884

The 99 pages of SB 884 have several differences from the Administration package

Most important to local farmers is the dairy support measure, which SB 884 says should range between 75 percent and 90 percent of parity with semi-annual adjustments

The Reagan measure sets a 70 percent parity base and calls for price determination using the five-year average market price

Helms's SB 884 also would reinstate the wool program, at present levels, for another four years Reagan's bill does not

The legislative drafting session, or mark-up, on the Farm Bill is scheduled to begin Monday, April 27

Helms says his goal is to have a bill to report out of Committee by May 15

Likewise there are a number of Farm Bill measures floating around the U.S. House, one with Administration support

Sorting out their provisions took much of the House Ag Committee's time this week, with most of the grain, tobacco, and other crops programs completed this week

Livestock subcommittee will take up dairy provisions beginning Tuesday, April 28

Putting the House and Senate versions together and gathering support for one bill or the other will have to be completed by May 15 so budget implications can be considered in the First Concurrent Budget Resolution slated for action on that day

Order 2 March milk set at $13.20

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Dairy farmers who supplied milk plants regulated under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders during March will be paid on the basis of a uniform price of 13.20 per hundredweight (28.4 cents per quart).

Market Administrator Thomas A. Wilson also stated that the uniform farm price per hundredweight was 13.46 in February 1981 and 12.08 in March 1980. The uniform price is a marketwide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products

The seasonal incentive fund removed 20 cents per hundredweight from the dairy farmers' uniform price for March, a total of $1,928,034.54. Deductions will continue through June and will be returned in the August through November uniform price calculations.

A total of 17,601 dairy farmers supplied the New York-New Jersey Milk Marketing Area with 964,017,269 pounds of milk during March 1981. This was an increase of 4.6 percent (about 42 million pounds) from last year The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $129,970,026.22.

Wilson said this included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not voluntary premiums or deductions authorized by the farmer.

Regulated milk dealers (handlers) utilized 399,572,917 pounds of milk for Class I 41.4 percent of the total. This milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low test and skim milks. For March 1981, handlers paid 14.89 per hundredweight (32.0 cents per quart) for Class I milk compared with 13.62 a year ago.

The balance, 58.6 percent, was used to manufacture Class II products including butter, cheese, ice cream and yogurt. For this milk, handlers paid 12.62 per hundredweight.

All prices quoted are for bulk tank milk received within the 201-210 mile zone from New York City.

Farm Show

"There are cracks and dips in parts of the building that are 50 years old," Hallowell said, "but there's no reason to think it is due to the water."

Benedict had said at his news conference that "the condition may have irrevocably undermined the entire complex."

Moving to the matter of the abolishment of the job of Fire Marshall, Hallowell said that the Department of Labor and Industry had determined that it was no longer needed

"Before the fire renovations in the complex, the Department of Labor and Industry had required a fire marshall," Hallowell said.

"With the renovations, such as the con truction of a fire tunnel and installation of heat sensors and smoke detectors which are connected directly to the Harrisburg Fire Department, Labor and Industry said the marshall was no longer needed."

Hallowell went on to explain that training was given to security personnel.

"We are still very anxious to protect the public and we are just doing it with other personnel instead of just one man," Hallowell said.

"We are always looking for hazards and seeing that fire exits are open and not blocked.

"We've always placed a high priority on protection of the public and with the automatic sprinkler and sensor system, a better and more sophisticated protection is being provided."

Hallowell pointed out that on the opening day of Farm Show one of the heat sensors had registered at the Harrisburg Fire Department and firemen were at the complex in a matter of minutes

"The firemen were not needed," he said, "but it illustrates how much more quickly a response can now be made."

"Generally, we have gotten a lot of favorable comments about the Farm Show and other events and the overall management of the complex is pretty good.

"With 100 temporary employes, 50 permanent employes, 100,000 visitors, 2,000 animals and other things, it becomes a real test of management.

"And we've received complimentary letters, ranging from equipment dealers to people involved in the dog show."

few bright spots in the farm economy during the past year

Some growers are planning a 10 to 15 percent increase in acreage, according to reports, and some who had dropped out of growing are expected to move back in.

If a 10 percent hike results countywide, it could increase tobacco acreage by some 1,300 or 1,400 acres to bring the total to the neighborhood of 15,000 acres This would be the highest number of tobacco acres in recent years.

Growers also appear to be making excellent use of Ridomil in the fight against blue mold after its approval for use for the first time in seed beds.

Last year, growers had to rely on periodic sprayings in the battle in the seed beds.

Thus far, no blue mold has been reported in the U S At this time last year, it had already appeared in places like Florida.

But there have been reports from Central and South America and Cuba, where the Ridomil was not used.

While the use of Ridomil is expected to help the growth of the small plants in the seed beds, growers will again need to be vigilant at the time of transplanting into the fields.

The new seed bed measures should help to reduce the sporulation load locally, but won't be a factor once transplantings are made into the field

Blue mold spores can be blown into the county from a long distance and there could be overwintering of the disease, which might break out if weather conditions were favorable for its development.

Thus, it's expected that growers will also rely again on the use of the systemic fungicide, Ridomil, in the fields.

Last year, there were two significant outbreaks of blue mold -- once late in the bed season and another later in the field growing season. But losses didn't approach those of the previous year

Gypsy moth booklet available

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources Bureau of Forestry now has available a revised version of the publication, "The Gypsy Moth."

The publication was prepared by the bureau's Division of Forest Pest Management under the direction of James O. Nichols, division chief.

The booklet traces the history of the forest insect, introduced into Massachusetts from Europe in 1869 to create a new race of silk-producing insects and describes the activities of the former Department of Forest and Waters, now a part of the Department of Environmental Resources, to prevent its spread throughout the commonwealth.

The publication contains illustrations showing counties infestated since 1969, describes the three stages of the insect — the larva, pupa and moth —, delves into natural control agents, offers hints for the homeowner to follow for foliage protection, and explains the commonwealth's Gypsy Moth Pest Management Program.

The booklet also provides information on the biological control program, in which foreign parasitic insects are used to prey on the gypsy moth, and on the cooperative spraying programs involving federal, state and local governments.

Free single copies of the revised publication are available from the Department of Environmental Resources, Division of Forest Pest Managment, 34 Airport Drive, Harrisburg International Airport, Middletown, Pa. 17057.

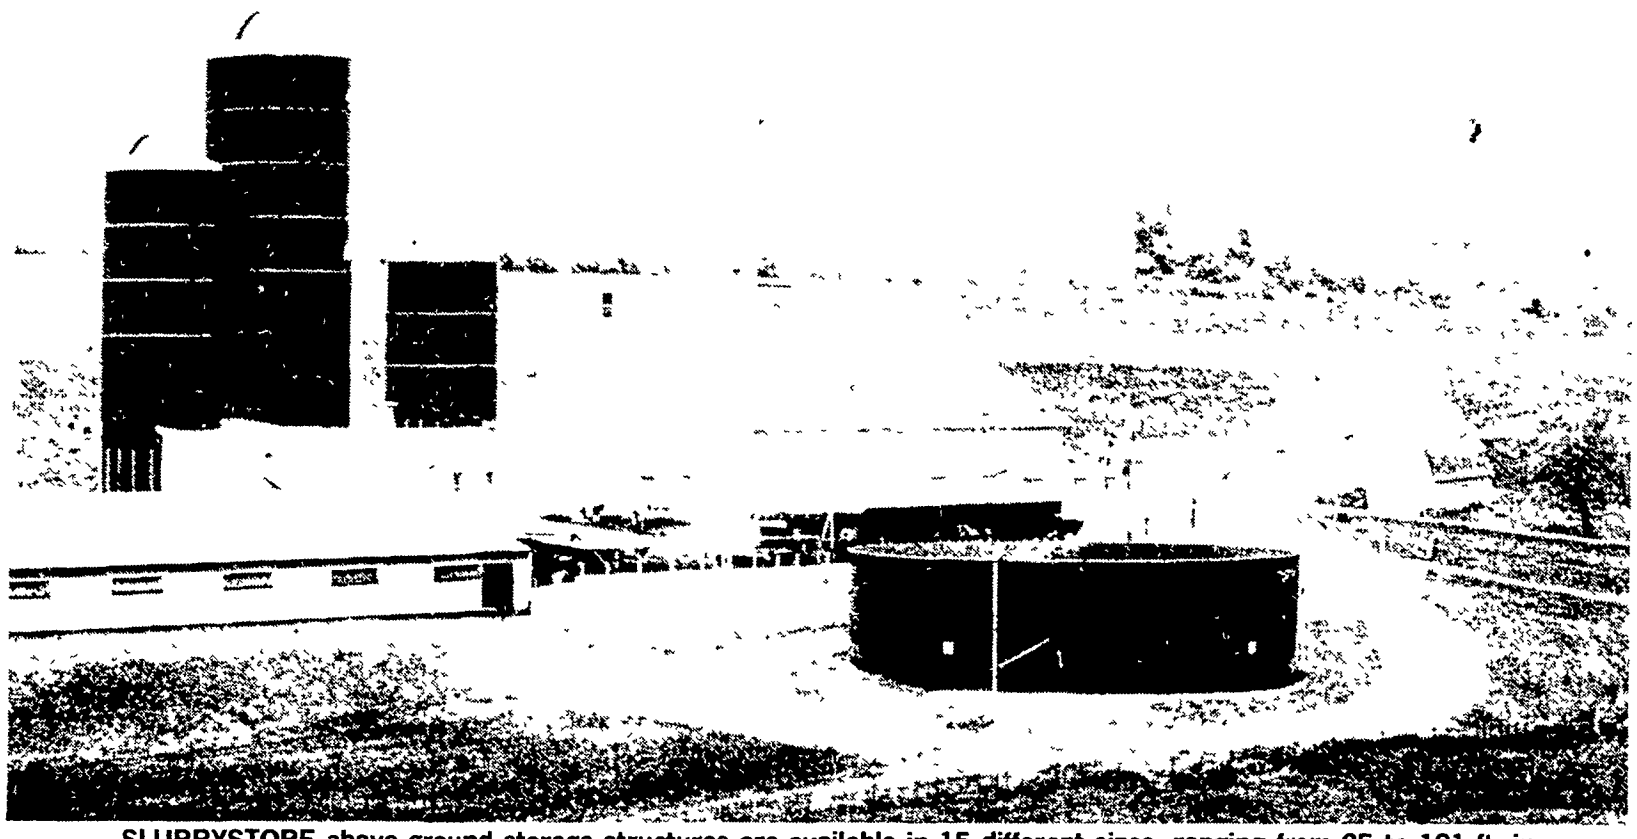
ANIMAL WASTES — — PROBLEM OR OPPORTUNITY?

The introduction of the SLURRYSTORE® System to North America in 1974 brought an attractive solution. Originally developed in Europe as an answer to strict anti-pollution regulations, the SLURRYSTORE system offers the farmer the best of both worlds — a way to significantly reduce labor while preserving in his own "fertilizer warehouse" most of the plant nutrients contained in manure...protecting the environment...and maintaining an attractive farmstead. An above-ground glass-fused-to-steel tank provides positive containment of liquid manure until optimum times to spread, such as just prior to planting row crops or top dressing after a cutting of forage. The system also features a variety of pumps, allowing automation of daily manure handling. At last the livestock farmer could manage his manure instead of remaining its slave.



SLURRYSTORE above ground storage structures are available in 15 different sizes, ranging from 25 to 101 ft. in diameter and up to 23 ft. tall. Capacities range from 52,000 to more than 1,300,000 gals. Each structure is built of strong, glass-fused-to-steel sheets similar to those used in HARVESTORE structures. Most vertical seams are double bolted for extra strength.

FEATURES

- ★ Glass-fused-to-steel sheets
- ★ Adapts easily to all types of pumping systems:
  - Piston Ram Pump
  - PTO Pit Pump
  - Electric Transfer Pump
  - Submersible Pump
- ★ Center agitation + over-top agitation + through-the-wall agitation
- ★ Cathodic protection system
- ★ Structure resale value

Farmers attend sheep shearing school

A group of 18 shepherds signed up for the sheep shearing school held Monday and Tuesday at the Edwin Harkins farm, R1 Pequea. The shearers, from Lancaster, York, Perry, and Lebanon Counties, practiced on Harkins's 125 Hampshire, Dorset, and crossbred ewes.

It's a bit awkward when you're a lefty—here, Nancy Sentman, Pond Grove, gets the knack of shearing from the "other" side. Providing instruction is Lancaster County Agent Nancy Myers.

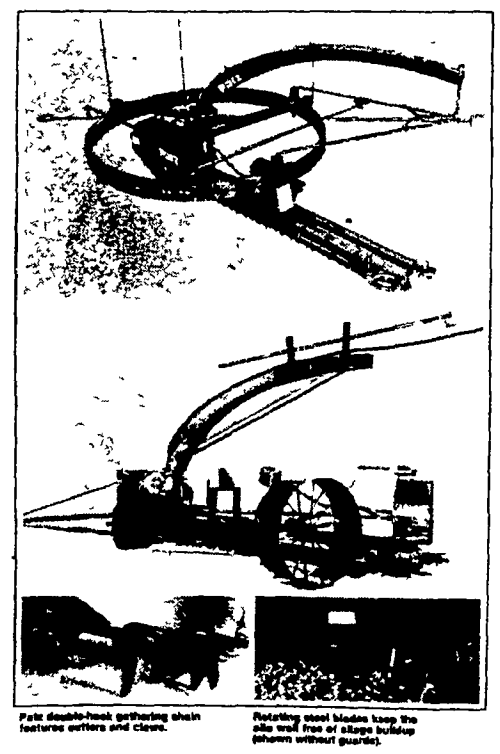
TERRE HILL
CONCRETE STAVE SILOS
THE PATZ SOLUTION:
Reliable
Year-Round Feeding

You know the problems caused by hard packed and frozen silage. Patz gives you two solutions to the problem — the Model RD 780 ring-drive silo unloader and the Model 94S surface-drive silo unloader.
Both unloaders feature a double-hook gathering chain with hardened steel cutters and claws that rip through frozen and packed silage. When you push the button, you know you can count on a smooth feeding operation.
Evaluate our powered silo wall cutters. Spring tension holds 4 self sharpening steel cutter blades in place to follow the curve of the silo wall. This keeps silage from building up along the walls, so you can be sure that you're getting all the feed where it belongs in the feeder and not stuck to the walls.
Want to know more about the Patz system? See your Patz dealer. He'll show you Patz quality and reliability, two important words to a farmer like you.



Patz double-hook gathering chain features cutters and claws.
Rotating steel blades keep the silo wall free of silage buildup (shown without guards).

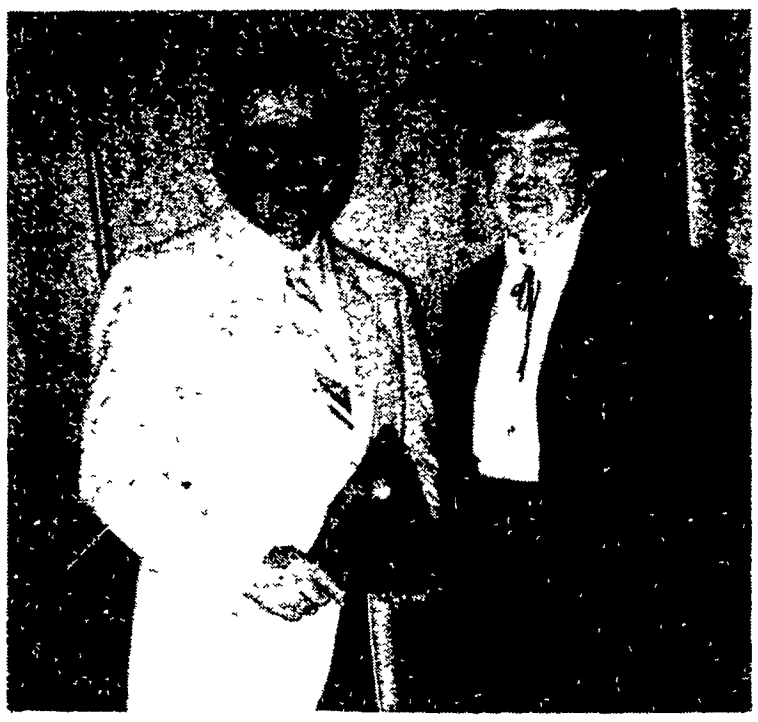
Franklin Guernsey breeders hold banquet

EDENVILLE — Edenville Community Center's famous "Shanty Beans" were enthusiastically consumed by the 100 members and friends attending the Annual Guernsey Club Banquet held at the Center recently.



Vaughn and Eileen Moore of Rockmoore Farm, Chambersburg, were honored by the County Guernsey Breeders for having the high Guernsey herd in DHIA for milk and fat. Their average was 12,932 pounds milk and 629 butterfat.

President Glenn Mummert opened the business meeting by introducing guests from the Agribusiness community and expressed appreciation for their support during the year. State Guernsey Breeders Association Field Representative, Lee Yost, expressed his thanks to Ginger Myers and Ruth Benedict for their part in making the State Association's 50th Anniversary Celebration a huge success.

Yost then gave a report on the business matters of the State Association. Ruth Benedict, also of the State Association, gave additional reports on the Celebration and explained the new dues structure. Mention was also made regarding the Futurity Class for the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show, and other dates pertaining to showing animals.

It was with a great deal of pride that Ruth was able to announce that her brother, Jeff Benedict of Waynesboro, Franklin County, was named as Pennsylvania's Outstanding Guernsey Boy

Philip Wagner, extension service dairy specialist, continued the program by giving the following awards for DHIA records.

Pest control expert helps protect Independence Hall

PHILADELPHIA — Peter F. Roughan, District Manager, of the J.C. Ehrlich Company, Lancaster, likes to think that he and his company made a contribution in preserving one of America's most revered shrines.

The local pest control company was called upon by the National Park Service to analyze a suspected termite condition which appeared at Independence Hall in Philadelphia.

According to Roughan, a resident of Lancaster, an infestation of termites did exist

"Termites are no respector of historic buildings, he related. They devour wood no matter whether in a million dollar building, a historic institution, a home, or a shack. It is a biological imperative for termites to eat wood in order to survive."

"Naturally, the officials of the National Park Service were extremely concerned due to the historic nature of Independence Hall. I was extremely impressed with the thoroughness with which they analyzed our proposal. A team of four government officials, including an individual known as a historic architect, was called in to scrutinize every detail of our contract specifications. Of course, we were proud to have been selected to do this work."

Making Independence Hall safe from termites took about two weeks for both exterior and interior treatment. Tours were not interrupted.

The exterior work consisted of treating the soil around the perimeter walls of the colonial building down to the footing. An EPA approved chemical, chlordane, was introduced under pressure into the soil. To protect the interior, the foundation walls were drilled and also treated with the chemical under pressure.

Termites live in the soil Roughan explained. They travel as far as necessary to reach wood, their source of food for the queen, the nymphs, and the entire colony.

They return to the soil about once every 24 hours for moisture. An active termite infestation can contain 250,000 worker termites.

"The treatment given Independence Hall should provide it with a minimum of five years protection," he stated. As part of the contract, they will provide periodic inspections through 1985.

"The termite control principles we applied at Independence Hall are identical to the processes we use in residences, institutions and business properties," Roughan pointed out. "Still, even though we have performed more than 40,000 termite control jobs in our 53 year history, this was one of the most exciting for us. It was a real professional challenge," Roughan said.

"Unfortunately the termite work at Independence Hall does enhance the myth that termits only attack old buildings. This is not true. In our area there are probably more termite infestations in newer buildings than in old ones. This is because wood scraps are often buried on the site of new construction. This then attracts a termite colony which will begin to infest the new home. The same evidence of termits may become apparent to the home owner as was observed by the officials at Independence Hall.

Termites build mud tunnels from the ground to their source of cellulose, typically wood. At about this time of the year, the termite reproductive will perform a mating flight and drop its wings. This is sometimes referred to as "termite swarm."

The wings near a window sill or the basement floor are another sign of a possible termite infestation Termits need only a crack crevice as small as one sixty-fourth of an inch to slip through.

The statistics have shown that termits attack more than five times as many homes as fires. Damage in the United States is estimated at more than $500 million annually.

To Vaughn and Eileen Moore, Rockmoore Farm, for the high herd in the County for milk and fat; 12,932 milk and 629 fat.

To Rodney and Darlene Stuff, Walnut Lane Farm, for high individual cow lactation in the test year: Walnut Fayvors Actress, 18,553 milk, 914 fat.

To Leigh Knepper, Monteview Farm, for high individual cow lifetime production who left herd in the test year. Robin of Monteview, 96,776 milk, 4689 fat, in eight lactations.

Wagner then presented awards for the outstanding 4-H work based on the project book. Receiving the Junior award was Nancy Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Myers.

Receiving the Senior award was Doug Layman, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Layman.

Paul Benchoff, vocational agriculture teacher from Waynesboro, presented similar awards for the outstanding FFA Guernsey project in the County.

Receiving these awards were, Curtiss Knepper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leigh Knepper; and Jeff Benedict, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Benedict.

The Franklin County Dairy Princess, Carol Hawbaker was introduced and gave a brief talk on the use of the "Real Seal".

New directors for the coming year were elected to a three year term. Serving in this capacity will be Harold Hoffeditz, Ken Myers and Dave Layman.

They will join John Moore, Glenn Mummert, Gerald Peckman, Rodney Stuff, Don McCullough and Don Bender to make up the Board of Directors for The Franklin County Guernsey Breeders.

The program for the evening was a fascinating slide presentation of the Isle of Guernsey given by Peter Witmer, Pen-Del Farms, Lancaster County.

The Guernsey Breed originated on this English Channel Island. Monks sent by the Duke of Normandy from France to colonize the Island brought with them the finest of French cattle. This was about the year 931 A.D.

Pictured in the slides was the monestary, still standing and several herds of the fine cattle developed by the Islanders. It is against the law to own any other breed of cattle than Guernseys on the Island.

Angus bull tops performance tested sale

STATE COLLEGE — An Angus bull owned by Pat-Rics Farm of Germanville, Lehigh County sold for $5000, highest bid at the 1981 Pennsylvania Performance Tested Bull Sale.

The sale was at the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center in State College. Prior to the sale, 84 bulls were put on test at the center.

The 60 top bulls sold for a total of $84,425, averaging $1,424 each. The 18 Angus bulls averaged $1,522; 13 Simmentals averaged $1,357; 21 Polled Herefords averaged $1,329; four Charolais averaged $1,850; and four Chianina averaged $263.

"These high averages brought the individual sale average up $100 from last year," Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell said.

"This was an excellent sale with standing room only," Hallowell said. "Breeders are to be commended for offering buyers some of the best bulls we have seen in years," he noted.

The top selling bull, "Pat-Rics Beau Chance 219," sold to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kyburg of Lyons, New York. The bull stood 51.9 inches tall, recorded the top adjusted yearling weight (365 day weight) of 1223 pounds and the top Angus average daily gain of 3.40 pounds.

The second high selling Angus, consigned by Dr. Burleigh Anderson of Loysville, Perry County sold to Philip Taylor of Lawton, New York. Taylor paid $1950 for "Meadow Mist Myogram 103," who had an ADG of 3.35 pounds.

"LVL-QT Jackson 14," was the top selling Simmental, consigned by John Clark of New Castle, Lawrence County. Dean Leech of Meadville. Crawford County was the successful bidder at $1357.

The bull was the tallest Simmental, standing 54.6 inches, and had the top 365 day weight at 1354 pounds.

Rolling Ridge Farms of Karns City, Butler County consigned the second highest selling Simmental at $1700. The bull, "RF Galant M590," sold to Joseph Miller of Normalville, Fayette County. "Galant," recorded the top Simmental ADG at 4.11 pounds.

In the Polled Hereford sale, $2500 bought "SBF Royal Gainer Lad," the top indexing Polled Hereford. The bull had an ADG of 3.48 pounds and a 365 day weight of 1184 pounds.

Spring Bottom Farm of Fairfield, Adams County consigned the bull which sold to Tellish Hereford Farm of Hookstown, Beaver County.

Falklands Farm of Schellsburg, Bedford County sold the second high selling Polled Hereford, "FLF Enforcer 0024," for $1800

The bull was purchased by Oscar Oberkircher of Danville, Montour County. "Enforcer," was the tallest Polled Hereford, standing 50.3 inches, recorded the top 365 day weight at 1,225 pounds and had the top ADG of the Polled Herefords at 3.32 pounds

"BCF Mr. Chief," topped the Charolais sale at $3200. The bull was consigned by Raymond Bratton of McVeytown, Mifflin County and sold to Sire Power, Inc. of Tunkhannock, Wyoming County.

"Mr. Chief," recorded the highest ADG of all bulls on test at 4.76 pounds. He topped the Charolais test in three other categories 365 day weight, 1313 pounds; lifetime weight per day of age, 3.72 pounds, and stood 54.5 inches tall.

The second high selling Charolais sold for $1800 to Stanley Crome of Annville, Lebanon County. The bull was consigned by Running Tree Farm of Flemington, New Jersey.

Nittany Farm of State College, Centre County consigned the two top selling bulls in the Chianina sale. "Nittany White Knight 8010," sold for $1950 while "Nittany Prince 8021," sold for $1300. Both animals were purchased by William Brockett of Ashburn, Virginia.

Rules for the 1981-82 Performance Testing Program will be available June 1, 1981. For rules and nomination forms, contact Robert Kimble, Director, Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Road, State College, PA 16801.

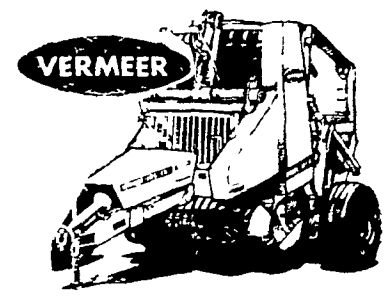
YOU BE THE JUDGE

The giant round baler represents the fastest, most efficient method of harvesting hay in the field today. Why? Because it's a one-man system. Lets you harvest, transport and feed more hay per day from your tractor seat than a whole crew of workers with conventional equipment.



- Bales a tight weather resistent hay package.
- Bale up to 18 tons per hour by yourself!

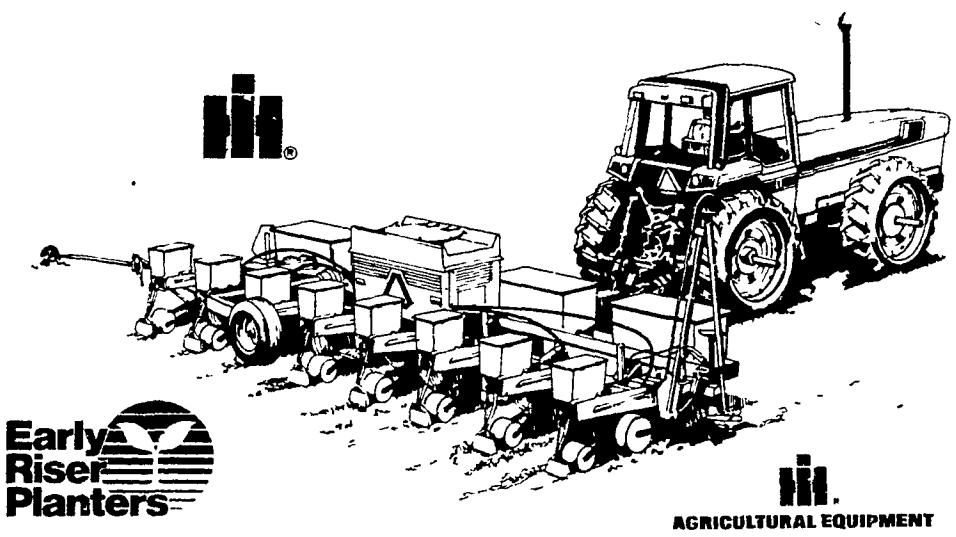
The Early Riser Planter.



Early Riser Planters

AGRICULTURAL EQUIPMENT

Excellent seed to soil contact even in no-till conditions.

Make the most of any kind of soil condition with an IH 800 Series Early Riser Planter And get your crops off to a better start

In many soils, you can do your planting in just one pass. Without tilling! The reason is the newly designed staggered double disk opener, so narrow that it moves less soil and penetrates more easily than any other planter Up to 600 lbs of down pressure per row can be applied, eliminating the need for special coulters in most soil conditions

The result is a narrower furrow that retains more moist soil along the sides Ground hugging twin covering disks positively cover the furrow trapping each seed in an air-tight pocket of moist soil Ideal seed to soil contact for fast germination and uniform emergence

The Early Riser Planter can handle tough ground, too. Under extremely tough soil conditions, a new no-till rippled coulter can be added to break ground ahead of the double disk openers on trailing planters When minimum tillage is desired, the 9¼" disk furrowing attachment moves through trash and clods to help keep seed depth—and germination—more uniform Naturally, the Early Riser Planter also works superbly with conventional tillage

Get the Red Edge at your IH Dealer today. Let him show you how the new Early Riser Planter can give you better seed to soil contact for early rising crops

SAVE UP TO $4,500 RED POWER DOLLARS

150TH ANNIVERSARY SAVINGS

SAVE BIG ON IH TRACTORS WITH RED POWER BUYER'S CHOICE

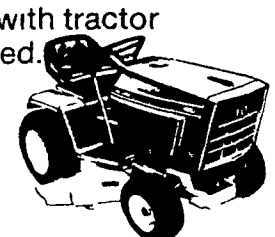
The Red Power Buyer's Choice gives you three ways to save on any new IH Tractor in stock during the International Harvester 150th Anniversary. And you begin your savings selection with great Red Edge Rebates.

Buyer's Choice No. 1...Get Red Edge Rebates Worth up to $3,500.

When you buy any new International Harvester Tractor that we have in stock between now and April 30, 1981, you can get a Red Edge Rebate of up to $3,500 direct from the Company. See the chart for a full list of rebates available

Buyer's Choice No. 2 ...Get a Free Cub Cadet Tractor.

Now through April, you can get a free Cub Cadet® Tractor when you buy any Series 86, 4WD or 2+2 Tractor. So if the Red Edge Rebate isn't the savings you need, maybe this is. The chart below has a complete listing of free Cub Cadet models with tractor purchased.



Buyer's Choice No. 3 ...Get Red Power Dollars valued up to $4,500.

Instead of getting a Red Edge Rebate or a free Cub Cadet with the IH Tractor you buy, you can get Red Power Dollars. These are good toward the purchase of any new IH equipment or parts. They may not be used toward the tractor purchase price and must be used by December 31, 1981.

These tractor savings may never be matched again. See us today for your best selection of IH Tractors...and for your selection of Buyer's Choice Savings.

This Husqvarna is the work of one design engineer.

He spends a lot of time engineering it And a lot more time out in the woods working with the prototype He may decide it needs to go back to the drawing board

When he's satisfied himself—he's satisfied the toughest critic he has

That's why the Husqvarna chain saw you buy will exceed your expectations Because it's not created by the compromise of a committee it's built on the integrity of one man

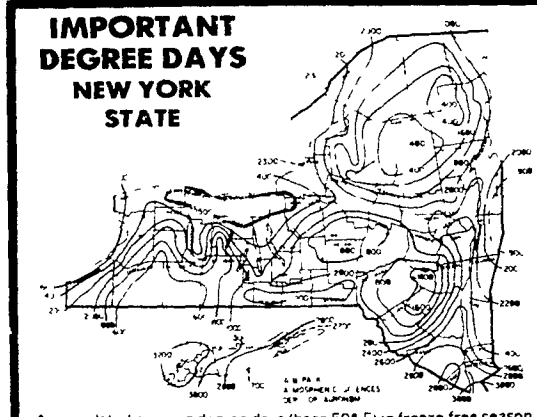
IMPORTANT DEGREE DAYS NEW YORK STATE



Accumulated growing degree days (base 50° F) in freeze free season

Lake Ontario is 246 feet above sea level and it's cooling effect is why the degree days decrease from 2500 plus near the lake. The Finger Lakes drain north, not south, towards Lake Ontario Land rising to over 2000 feet above sea level at it's southern sources The best high lime Ontario and Honeyoye soils are located within and about 25 miles surrounding the 2500 degree plus area. The longest growing season and both high lime soils are in the same territory and corn for grain questionable below 2200 degree days.

You need other information General Soil Map of New York State Snowfall amount different areas (50" to 60" in Penn Yan, Canandaigua, Geneva area) Yield potential different soils Every prospect that comes to my office will be given copies of bulletins and maps based on government surveys Don't take a salesperson opinion on these facts See the bulletin! We tell it as it is

We have over 200 farms for sale from Batavia to Utica The best land and longest degree day Why settle for less?

Apple recipe worth $50 to Eleanor Campbell

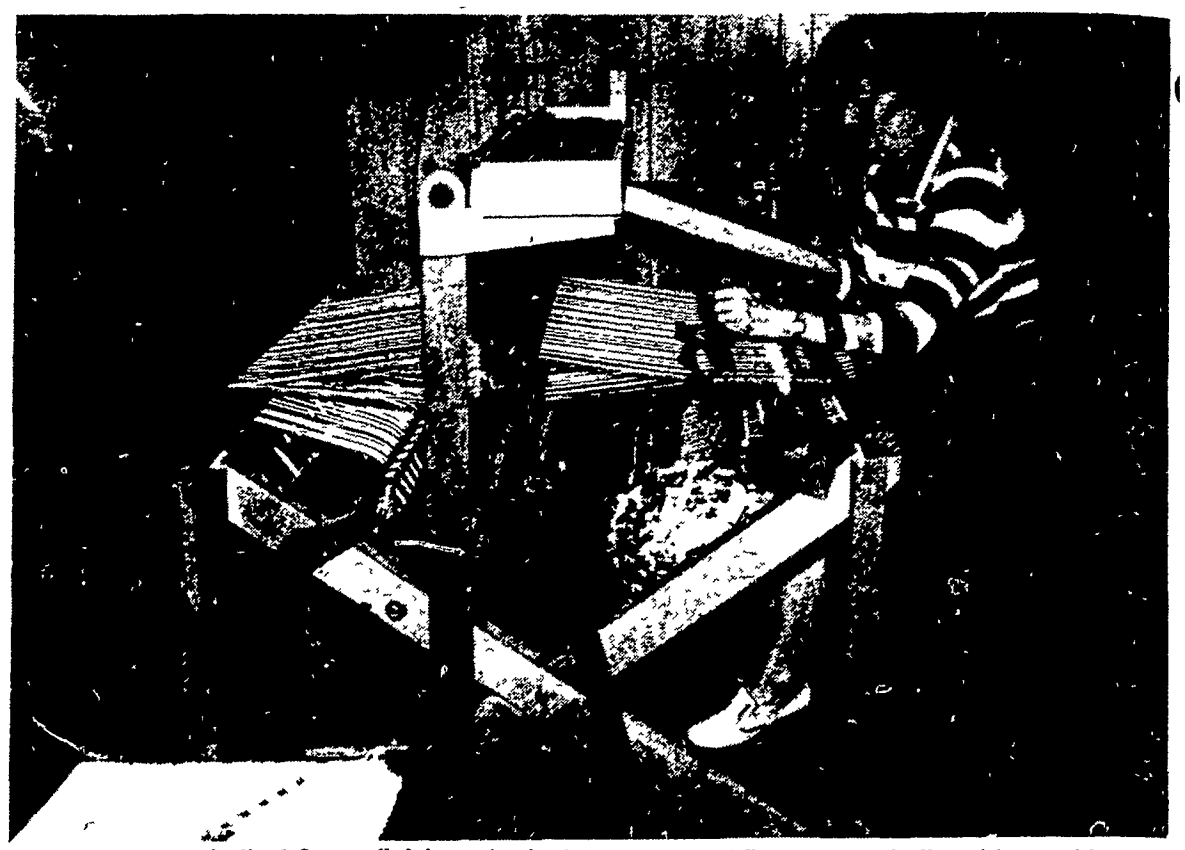
BY JANE BRESEE
Staff Correspondent

Eleanor Campbell of Sayre, Bradford County, manages to glorify the Lord in everything she does Being one of the top ten finalists in the Pennsylvania Apple Recipe Contest was no exception, for with half of the $50 prize money she will send five kids to Child Evangelism Summer Day Camp

Eleanor, and husband Harold, live on their seven acre farm quite secluded off Keystone Avenue, a busy street connecting Sayre and Waverly.

Originally, the place was a 14 acre truck farm bought in 1880 by Harold's great uncle, Tom Paul, who came over from Scotland where he was a gardener in one of the Queen's gardens Before Mr. Paul died, he extracted a promise from Harold's parents that they would move there and take care of his maiden sister This they did, and Harold was later born in the same house where he has stayed all his life, carrying on the family tradition of truck farming.

A few years ago, the town bought seven acres from them, but the buildings remain as they were; set back from the street and surrounded by large trees.



Eleanor Campbell of Sayre finishes the last of ten brightly colored rugs she has loomed this winter. Eleanor likes to keep busy helping with Child Evangelism Fellowship, cooking and making crafts.

Grandfather Apple Doll with his miniature cane guard the prize winning Apple Pudding Dessert. The cider sauce is ready in the blue pitcher.

Homestead Notes

Harold has run the Keystone Cider Mill all of his life, in late years pressing as much as 500 tons of apples a season into cider. He buys and hauls the apples from New York State, and then delivers the cider to many outlets to sell.

From some of the earliest and most perfect apples, they make candied apples which they sell from their stand by the street along with the apples, cider, tons of pumpkins and squashes, and other farm produce.

Harold also built a roller skating rink many years ago, called the Keystone Skating Rink. It is now being operated by their son Fred. Being the only rink for miles around, it is greatly used by churches and private groups as well as the public.

Within the last two or three years, Harold rented about 4 acres of sandy river bottom land just south of Athens, and planted strawberries. The well-managed patch has yielded tons of strawberries to people who pick their own.

Eleanor fits into the Campbell family beautifully helping with all the outdoor work, and loving to make "homey" crafts. Through the years she has grown her own flowers to make dried flower bouquets, and also makes corn husk dolls, dried apple dolls, and many other clever things which she sells out front from a cart beside the apples and cider.

It was her lifetime association with apples that helped Eleanor decide to enter the Pennsylvania Apple Recipe Contest which she noticed last fall in the local paper, The Evening Times. "Why not," she said she thought at the time," "it won't hurt to try," and she sent in a recipe for Apple Pudding Dessert.

The dessert is one she had tasted in an eating place once in New York State she and Harold were up buying apples. Originally the recipe called for lemon sauce, but she substituted cider sauce instead.

She had almost forgotten about the whole thing until, in January, a phone call came saying she had been chosen as one of the top ten finalists out of 220 entries. She was asked to come to Hershey on February 3 with the baked recipe to compete for the first prize.

Well, she said she was shocked, but after thinking it over a while she decided to go. After all, she might win the $200.

Her biggest problem was having the recipe freshly baked the day of the judging. The Hershey Convention Center was a good 4 or 5 hour drive away. But she solved the problem by inviting Sylvia Murphy along. (Sylvia's husband, Malcolm, is the president of the Board of Child Evangelism in Bradford County, and Eleanor knew them well).

They started out at 4 a m, stopped at Sylvia's friend's house

$50 apple recipe

near Harrisburg, baked the dessert, and were in Hershey in time for the contest.

It was nearly noon at the Hershey Convention Center when she set up her display with the dessert on a burlap tablecloth complete with a beautiful blue old-fashioned pitcher filled with the Cider Sauce. She instructed the judge to warm it, pitcher and all, in the microwave oven before pouring it over the cake. Then Eleanor and the rest were sent to a wonderful free lunch in the dining room while the judges made their decisions.

Upon returning to the judging room, Eleanor found that the sauce had not been touched, and she had been chosen one of the six finalists winning $50 each. She was satisfied with her prize, but was sorry that the sauce had not been tried.

The first prize had been won by Mrs. George Tombler, Jr of Easton with her recipe "Three Apple Mold Salad." The recipes in which apple cider, apple juice, and applesauce were an ingredient will be compiled and published in a booklet to be distributed throughout the state this fall during the apple harvest.

Eleanor is giving half her prize money to Child Evangelism and with the rest will buy some flowering shrubs to plant outside her kitchen window.

Child Evangelism has been the center of much of Eleanor's life since in the early 40's when she travelled to several public schools each week to teach the kids Bible lessons. In those days there was no question whether or not the Bible could be taught in the schools, Eleanor said.

Mrs. Gladys Burnham, a well-loved gradeschool teacher at Ridgebury, threw her school door wide open and gave Eleanor as much time as she wanted telling her that the Bible was more important than the other lessons.

Mrs. Dorothy Halstead, then a teacher at Hanlon Hill, used the tracts to teach reading. Kids in nearly all the schools knew their memory verses each week because the teacher drilled them daily.

One of the highest compliments that Eleanor ever received was written permission given to her in the early '40's by the County Superintendent of Schools, Morrow, and his assistant, DeWitt, to teach Bible in any of the schools in the County.

In the late '40's she and Mrs. Eleanor Holden who with her husband has had a lifetime gospel broadcast ministry in the county and who now runs a Bible bookstore, decided they needed help to teach the children, and were the instigators in getting the Child Evangelism Fellowship into Bradford County.

Since that time the CEF has grown considerably; conducting release time Bible classes from many of the public schools, Bible clubs, and summer day camps. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell still serve on the board of directors.

The Campbells also have a cabin on Barclay Mountain near the state game lands. There, Mrs. Campbell says, is th. only place she gets to rest. Resting to her may mean picking mountain huckleberries One year she and Harold picked a couple hundred quarts to sell for CEF.

Eleanor relates that the gas bill for the CEF car was so high that year, that the Lord seemed to say to her that "There's berries to pick on that mountain".

She has never seen a wild bear while picking berries, but couple of years ago, she was out walking with another girl and came upon a wounded bear which apparently had just been in a fight with another one.

Not one to sit still a minute, Eleanor made ten rag rugs on her loom this past winter, and finished a beautiful and unusual quilt of her own design. Each block is a different leaf grouping from a local tree. It is quilted beautifully too; an excellent job for one who had never quilted before

Hanging at all the windows in her house are burlap curtains trimmed with ball edging. Eleanor has always made a variety of things with burlap. Occasionally she wears an embroidered burlap vest she made for herself.

Energy seems to be Eleanor's middle name. It is most difficult to tell by her looks and actions how old she really is. She had planned to have her whole house cleaned by the last of March, but she is a little behind scheduled - no doubt because she has been helping the Child Evangelism director move into a new apartment!

Where there's a will, there's a way, and since Eleanor has the will to serve, she finds a way, whether it's teaching Bible classes in schools, picking blueberries on the mountain, or winning in apple recipe contests. Along with the stars of childrens' souls in Eleanor's crown, there will probably be golden apples, amethyst huckleberries, and ruby strawberries!

A HAM FOR EASTER

Easter is coming and it's time to think of the festive Easter ham

Choosing a ham to fit your taste and budget isn't always easy But once you have made your decision and the ham is in your grocery cart, maintaining its wholesomeness is up to you Ham, like all meat, naturally contains certain bacteria Keeping it safe to eat means storing it properly, cooking it thoroughly, and handling leftovers with care

With the exception of small canned hams, (not labeled "perishable, keep under refrigeration"), and dry cured ham - such as country style - all ham must be refrigerated before cooking

For best quality, a cured whole ham should be kept in the refrigerator no longer than 7 days Any cured ham cut smaller than a whole ham will keep in the refrigerator safely for 3 to 5 days. Unopened canned ham can be kept in the refrigerator up to six months without loss of quality.

When it comes to cooking ham, there are three temperatures to remember, depending on the kind of ham you select

If the ham is a canned or fully-cooked type, it may be eaten cold without any advance preparation If you prefer it warm, heat it to an internal temperature of 140 degrees F

If the ham is the cook-before-eating kind, simmer or bake it to an internal temperature of 160 degrees F

If you are cooking shoulder cuts of pork like cured picnics or shoulder butts, heat them to an internal temperature of 170 degrees F Fresh ham should be treated like fresh pork and heated to 170 degrees F

To cook ham place roast with fat side up on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Ham halves or quarters should be roasted cut side down Insert a meat thermometer into the roast so that the tip is in the center but not touching bone or fat. Roast, uncovered, without added liquid, until meat thermometer registers appropriate internal temperature.

Do not bother to remove the rind from the ham before roasting It's easier to do when the meat is hot If you wish to glaze the ham, remove the rind before glazing - about one-half hour before the end of the cooking period

For easier slicing, allow the roast to stand 15 to 20 minutes after removing it from the oven before carving

If there are any leftovers refrigerate promptly after your Easter dinner Do not allow them to come to room temperature before refrigeration

HARD COOK EGGS SUCCESSFULLY

If you are dreading hard cooked eggs for the Easter holidays because you have trouble peeling them, try the following method I know you will be pleased with the results.

Pierce the large end of each egg with a pin going down 3/8 inch through the shell Lower the eggs gently, by twos or threes, using a slotted spoon into boiling water The water should cover the eggs by at least one inch. Add 1½ teaspoons salt for each quart water. When the water returns to the boiling point, regulate the heat so that the water displays only a very slight bubble. Set your timer depending on the size of your eggs Small and medium size eggs should be cooked for 11 minutes; Large eggs should be cooked for 12 minutes, Extra Large for 13 minutes, and Jumbo eggs for 14 minutes. When your timer tells you that the cooking time is complete, drain the eggs and immediately cover them with cold water.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

My pleasure is to see things neat and in order In other words, "A place for everything and everything in its place." But not all family members agree with this theory. And, it is quite difficult, in fact I might say impossible, to run my life this way.

My thoughts jumb from this activity to that activity and then back again. I'm trying to organize the 4-H Club in my community and am having trouble getting leaders for particular projects. Telephoning takes a lot of time that I could be using to weed my garden and rake the lawn.

Then too I try to plan on time to take my aged mother on necessary business trips This too is something to which I must devote time; plus, bothersome trips to doctors and dentists for checkups.

I've wanted to invite some of my friends to drop in for cake and coffee before the busy garden season is here We all are interested in quilts and coverlets and recently attended a lecture on them at a local museum.

Trying to contact all of our children and invite them for an Easter dinner is also a job. Even after I find them at home I discover that they have other plans. One is going fishing with friends and one has promised another family to eat at their home. Oh well, then the Easter Bunny won't have so many baskets of candy to fill and hide.

As this is our youngest childs last year in High School, she too has things for me to do in the evenings. There is the school play and the Wind Ensemble in which she plays her flute. Of course I enjoy these activites but it seems there is no easy way to have an orderly and peaceful life style.

But what am I talking about, there will probably be plenty of time for peace and quiet in years to come. As of now, I must bake that cake and cook some of my fresh rhubarb.

Celebrate Easter with lamb

April is the month to eat enticing, versatile and nutritious lamb.

Lamb is available year-round with supplies particularly abundant in the spring, as we approach the Christian Easter celebrations when many use lamb for their family dinners

Lamb offers an abundance of nutrition, is low in calories and is easy to prepare, according to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture

Lamb is a rich source of high quality protein It has substantial quantities of the B-vitamins, zinc and phosphorus

Lamb is also low in fat content Since lamb meat is from a young animal (under one year of age) it does not have heavy marbling in the muscle Lamb fat is trimmable, which makes the meat ideal for diets to maintain ideal weight

When cooking lamb, preserve its natural tenderness with low cooking temperatures, avoid overcooking, and use the cookery method appropriate to the cut

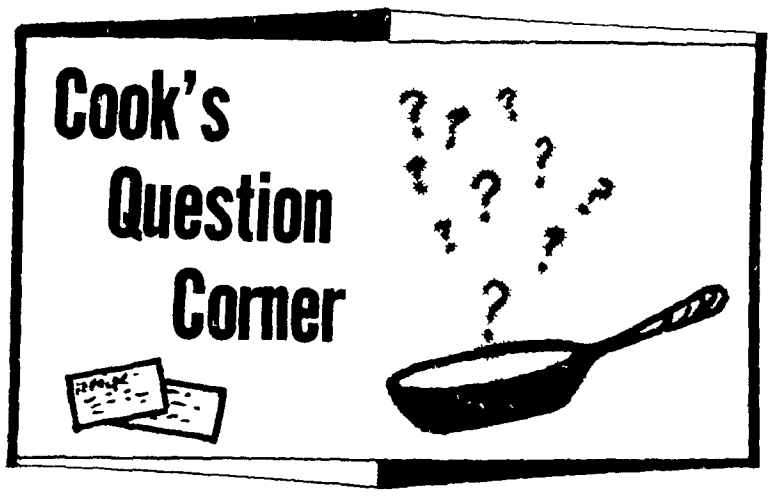
Athena's lamb and eggplant, a recipe featured this week, is a great meal for Easter. Lamb is a tradition for this Christian celebration dating back to a time long before Christ.

Cook's Question Corner



QUESTION - I would like another ham loaf recipe to add to my collection. Does anyone have a good recipe for it?

Karen Bauer, R1, Lancaster

ANSWER - This week we received answers for "Shake and Bake" mix and a jelly roll. Find them at the end of the recipe section.

ANSWER - A few weeks ago we published a Strawberry Crunch Cake recipe which failed to turn out right for one of our readers. The donor of this recipe was gracious enough to share that recipe with us once again, and the ingredients and instructions she used are still the same as those we printed before. We're sorry, Mrs. Swiercynski, that your cake didn't turn out as well as the recipe donor's did. Perhaps, if you have the ingredients to spare, you could try the recipe again and see how it compares. Good luck!

From conventional to no-tillage planting, John Deere's Max-Emerge™ Conservation Planter lets you experiment in most conditions

If you've been wanting to experiment with minimum-till planting, no-till planting, or both, check out the Max-Emerge Conservation Planter. It's available in 4-row adjustable, 6-row narrow or wide, and 8-row narrow planters. You can even use the 4-row model to experiment with row widths from 30 to 40 inches.

A ripple or fluted coulter cuts a path ahead of the Tru-Vee™ openers with cutting depth controlled by depth-gauging wheels. Heavy-duty springs help transfer weight from the frame to each planting unit to keep coulters in the ground. And for extra-tough conditions, optional cast-iron firming wheels firm soil around seed, not over it. Stop in soon to learn more about the Conservation Planters.

All around the barngarden

Okay, okay!

We know it's really the "barnyard". Although we don't know why it's called a barnyard,, because everything grows in a barnyard just as everything grows in a garden. .

Anyway, what if you replaced part of the words that described things around the barn? You'd end up with things like:

pigpencil

protest fence
abovewalk
dog rope
airhog
milking receptable

cowbell sidewalk
pickett fence cattnap dog leash ground hog

SPECIAL HOG FARMER PRICE PROTECTION PLAN

To help hog farmers who would like to have the protection of a commodities hedge but don't want to get involved in the market, Trade Tech Management, Inc. has developed a plan where you can sell your fattened hogs to Trade Tech at a set price based on the current futures market price. Trade Tech assumes any risk if the price goes down. You put up no hedging money. You never get called for additional money. Now you have the same kind of price protection plan many Western hog farmers have used for many years.

For more information and our current price quote, call David K. Sauder, President, Trade Tech Management, Inc., 1020 Stony Battery Road, Lancaster, PA 17601. Phone: (717) 898-0130.

ALSO ANNOUNCING A TWO-HOUR COMMODITIES HEDGING SEMINAR

To help farmers take some of the risk out of farming, a special two-hour Commodities Hedging Seminar is scheduled for

THURSDAY, APRIL 23, at 7:15 P.M.
AT TRADE TECH MANAGEMENT, INC. OFFICE
1020 Stony Battery Road, Lancaster, PA 17601
(located near Indian Springs Golf Course)

At the seminar, we'll review the commodities charts for cattle, grains and hogs. In addition, President, David K. Sauder, Registered Commodities Advisor, will use his direct computer contact with the Chicago Board of Trade and the Mercantile Exchange to show how to lock in a future selling price on any commodity you may have to sell or that you may need to buy. Several motion pictures will illustrate the materials covered by the seminar leader.

While this seminar is not free because we are offering a lot of information, you'll want to plan to attend. The cost is $20 per person refunded if you ever want to open a hedging account with Trade Tech.

So, hear how this commodities advisor predicts future prices. Attend this seminar and learn how you can lock in a profitable price on your farm commodities with a future's contract. You need to register in advance so we can prepare for you. For more information or to make reservations, call David K. Sauder, Trade Tech Management, Inc., 1020 Stony Battery Road, Lancaster, PA 17601. Phone: (717) 898-0130.

LITITZ — Most cooks have a favorite recipe for certain dishes and if you haven't found yours among the lamb recipes, perhaps you'd like to try Lauren Putnak's favorite lamb recipe

Lauren is the Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen from Monongahela in Washington County.

The seventeen-year-old daughter of Mr and Mrs Larry Putnak, Lauren is a senior at Ringgold High School where she is a member of the publication and yearbook staff.

Lauren's work as queen is surpassed only by the list of activities with which she has participated

For eight years, Lauren has been a member of the Ginger Inn 4-H club with market lambs She is also a member of the Washington County Sheep and Wool Growers Auxilary which is currently working on a "Sheep and Field Day," to be held June 20 at the Washington County fair grounds.

Lauren raises registered Suffolk sheep and says she enjoys entering them in ladies lead competitions.

This young lamb queen says she has found working to promote the states sheep and wool industry a "most rewarding experience"

Lauren's favorite lamb recipe is:

BARBECUED LAMB LEG

1 leg of lamb
1 t. whole cloves
2 T. dill pickle liquid
1/4 c. salad oil
1/3 c. firmly-packed brown sugar
1/4 c. finely chopped dill pickles
1 t. salt
1/2 t. allspice

Stud leg with cloves. Place lamb on rack in shallow pan in oven or on spit of barbecue unit. Insert meat thermometer and roast at 325 degrees approximately 2 1/2 hours or to desired degree of doneness. Baste frequently with sauce while cooking.

Lamb is a favorite for all ages

LITITZ — Throughout history, many cultures have made lamb a favorite meal, prepared to suit their own tastes and lifestyles These traditional lamb dishes have come to the United States with the immigrants who settled here.

Today, this lightly flavored meat's versatility can be used in hundreds of recipes, according to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Division.

Prepared as kebabs, lamb is one of our oldest meal customs. Nomads in the Middle East skewered meat on their swords to cook at their campfires. Although we no longer carry swords, kebabs are still delicious and popular.

The Paschal lamb is recorded in the Bible as the meal of Passover. This tradition continues with roast leg of lamb, a perennial Easter favorite.

The Persians roasted whole baby lambs over open fires, stuffed with rice, raisins, peas or pine nuts. During the Middle Ages, lamb was roasted over great open fires to feed large numbers. Today, barbecued on a spit or in a pit, lamb continues as a great way to serve party crowds.

Columbus brought lamb to the New World on his scond voyage. When American's first "cookery book" was printed in 1796, included were recipes for hearty lamb dishes like lamb and corn stew and cold weather lamb chowder. One of Thomas Jefferson's favorites at Monticello was roast saddle of lamb with brown gravy.

Today lamb is being used in both traditional dishes and in new ways as well. Ethnic dishes like ravioli, teriyaki, goulash and enchiladas taste great with lamb.

Lamb is being used in sauces, cut into medalions, en papillote (like fish), and even as weiner-schnitzel. Lamb filled pastries like quesadillas, pierogies and won ton prove taste appeal.

Lamb has been a favorite through all ages. It's easy to see why this special, lightly flavored meat adds a special dimension to many special recipes.

Culinary cutups yield thrifty meals with lamb

HARRISBURG — Food shoppers often think of a leg of lamb only as a special Sunday meal or Easter dinner. But a leg of lamb may be your best buy the next time you visit the meat counter.

According to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Division, an eight-pound leg of lamb can provide a family of four with six tasty, nutritious meals when cut properly.

Lamb is a good buy, with very little fat covering and only a minimal of marbling. Lamb is tender by nature, and by cooking at very low temperatures, down to 275°F. when time allows, the meat is one of the best you can purchase for good eating and is a diversity of cooking ideas.

You can save hundreds of dollars a year if you learn to do your own meat cutting. Boning a leg of lamb is as easy as boning a chicken breast.

The secret is the proper tools, starting with a good, sharp five-inch boning knife. Sharp is the key word. Knives should be sharpened on a 20 to 25 degree angle, both ways. A sharper angle on one side of a knife will take the edge off, rather than put it on. Eight to 10 strokes per side will usually put a keen edge on the blade. You will also need a whetstone, oil stone or sharpening steel; a breaking or butcher knife; and a cutting board. These tools are available at kitchen equipment shops, houseware departments, a butcher or restaurant supply shop.

When purchasing a fresh leg of lamb, the first part of your six meal culinary cut-up begins before you leave the store. Since most consumers do not own a meat saw, ask your butcher to cut four, one-inch steaks from the sirloin end of the leg. Of, if you prefer a roast, remove the sirloin section in one piece.

After the steaks are cut, remove the "fell" (the outer parchment-like skin) and excess fat. If the fell is left on, it will shrink and cause the steaks to curl when cooking. If you cut off the entire sirloin to be used as a roast, leave the fell on to preserve the natural juices when roasting.

The portion of leg with the sirloin removed is a "3/4 leg," most commonly seen in retail meat cases. It can be roasted as is, or deboned and formed into rolled roast, a butterflied leg, or cut into many different meal portions.

To debone the 3/4 leg, turn the left, with the exposed rump bone up. Run the knife along the rump bone, working the knife around the bone to loosen it. Keep the blade close to the bone, feeling the bone with your knife, taking short strokes.

After the rump bone is removed, start cutting at the ball joint of the center leg bone. Make a straight cut at the approximate center of the leg until your blade reaches the next joint, known as the stifle joint. Work the point of the blade around this joint and length of the center bone until the bone is totally exposed. Remove the bone and put it with the other soup bones.

The shank bone which runs from the small end of the leg to the middle is next. Using the same technique as with the rump bone, work the knife around the shank bone until it is completely exposed. Remove the shank bone and put it with the others (The learning process takes time in boning, but even your mistakes are edible.)

Now that the bone is removed, cut the "butterflied leg" into four sections, following the natural major seams. This will give you a small round outside muscle; the center muscle, the sirloin muscle and shank muscle. Bone placements will help you identify names of muscle by relating to which bone was removed from each area.

Taking the outside muscle, cut the thickest portion across the grain into one-inch slices. You will get at least four nice size fillets. You can use these slices for broiling, grilling or pan broiling.

Cubes of shish kebabs and fondues can be cut from the sirloin muscle with cubes for stew cut from the shank muscle.

The thinner portion of the leg, (the center muscle) can be sliced into strips for stroganoff.

Congratulations! Your leg of lamb is now bones for soup, cubes for stew, sirloin steaks, lamb strips, fondue, lamb fillets and shish kebab.

Hints for cooking lamb

HARRISBURG — Whether you are a weekend barbecue chef, the family gourmet or the continental cuisine specialist, lamb can be easily prepared by everyone, according to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Lamb has a delicate flavor and tenderness which makes it a favorite meal when cooked properly. Cook it at moderate heat for most dishes. All protein foods toughen and shrink excessively when cooked at a sustained heat. (However, cook the meat to the doneness you prefer). Lamb roasts are generally cooked anywhere from 140 degrees (rare), to 170 degrees (well done) internal temperature. A roast should stand in a warm place 15 to 20 minutes when it is removed form the oven, to make slicing easier. During this time, the roast continues to cook inside and the internal temperature rises from five to ten degrees.

If fresh lamb is to be used within a day or two, leave it in the film wrapping and store it in the coldest part of the refrigerator, at 32 to 40 degrees. If the meat is to be stored more than two days, remove the wrappings and cover loosely with wax paper. Freeze the lamb if it is not to be used by the end of the fourth day.

Ground lamb should not be kept unfrozen more than 24 hours since ground meat does not have the keeping quality, of solid pieces. Variety meats, such as liver, kidney and heart, do not keep well either, and should be used as soon as purchased, frozen or precooked.

Lamb need not be defrosted before cooking., Frozen leg, loin or shoulder roasts should be cooked at 300 to 325 degrees and rib roasts at 350 to 375 degrees allowing one-third to one-half longer for cooking as for fresh meat.

One day left to decorate Easter eggs

If you haven't decorated your Easter eggs yet, these beautiful and colorful eggs might give you a few ideas. But remember, there is only one day left till Easter. So start now to color and paint the eggs and show your children some fun too.

Egg art proves popular craft

LITITZ — The egg is often seen as the symbol of perfection, nature's perfect shape.

There is little wonder then, that many arts and crafts involve eggs and egg shapes. Every child is familiar with colored Easter Eggs. Farm children with araucana hens get a redy made product when their birds lay pink, blue and green eggs.

But egg art is not just for Easter Customs and traditions throughout the world have decorated eggs with virtually any material to be named, from pastry and wool to sea shells.

Reeds have often been used as applique for eggs, and are thought to be very good luck. When a dry reed is soaked with rain it turns green again, symbolizing immortality.

Carl Faberge, a Swiss Immigrant to Russia, reached new heights from 1884 - 1917 with his creations of jeweled eggs for the Imperial family. His eggs were crafted from precious metals and stones and had secret springs which revealed surprises like miniature palaces or jewelled birds.

Pennsylvania Dutch crafts with eggs include eggshell portraits made with colored egg chips. The Pennsylvania Dutch are also credited with an art form known as scratch-carving.

In scratch-carving, eggs are dyed using natural dyes like onion skins, marigolds, beets, blueberries or red cabbage. When the dye is set, designs are then etched through the dye to the shell. Intricately scratch-carved eggs are given year round, and often become family keepsakes.

There are hundreds of arts and crafts relying on the egg. In fact, Pennsylvania houses an egg museum. Located in Effort, Pa., in the Poconos, the Egg Museum has 3,000 displays of egg arts and crafts from 70 countries.

This Easter might be the time for you to try your hand at egg art. Someday your egg could be enshrined at the Egg Museum.

Color eggs the natural way

LITITZ — Did you ever wonder how the first Easter eggs were colored? Long, long ago our ancestors noticed that berries and certain other foods color the fingers when being prepared, and that beverages such as tea, wine, and fruit juice leave stains on clothing that won't wash out. People have been making use of natural coloring agents ever since.

Instead of using pre-packaged Easter egg coloring kits this year, the family might enjoy experimenting with these natural colors, suggests JoAnn Cloud, University of Delaware dietetics student.

A check of the kitchen cupboards should turn up several possibilities. Spices, teas, herbs, vegetables, and fruits all yield color. The following list should help:

Beverages. tea, coffee, grape juice.

Fruits pomegranates, plums, purple grapes, blueberries, blackberries, huckleberries.

Seeds: annatto, sunflower

Vegetables: onion skins (red and white), watercress (outer dark green leaves), spinach, purple cabbage, carrot tops.

Use either the kitchen stove or a portable burner for your egg coloring. You'll need a measuring cup and spoon, stirring rods, a strainer and an old pot or coffee can. Choose utensils you don't mind having stained.

. The amount of coloring agent you'll need to prepare your coloring liquid will depend on the color you want to achieve and the number of eggs you plan to color. Generally speaking, the more coloring agent you use, the darker the coloring liquid. Just keep in mind you'll need enough liquid to color the entire egg. Also, the longer the egg stays in the liquid, the darker it will become.

To mix your coloring liquid, fill your pot or coffee can with enough water to cover your eggs, but don't add the eggs yet. Add the coloring agent and one tablespoon of salt to help draw out the color. Allow the mixture to soak for six to 12 hours.

Since the coloring process involves long cooking, you might as well start with raw eggs to save time and evergy, Cloud suggests.

If you want parts of the eggs to remain white, color those parts with white crayon or use candle wax. The coloring won't stick to the wax. Then add the raw eggs to the colored water and simmer gently for 30 minutes. Do not boil.

Remove your colored, hard-cooked egg and strain the residue from the coloring liquid. The liquid may be used again to color more eggs.

Coloring eggs is old tradition

LITITZ — The coloring of eggs at Easter was first introduced to America in the 1600's by Dutch settlers in Pennsylvania and New York, according to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

The Dutch settlers brought with them many games centered around the brightly colored egg. The customs of Easter egg hunts and egg rolling spread throughout the colonies and are still being practiced today, adding to the merriment of celebrating Easter.

The tradition of the Easter egg is one of our oldest customs, going as far back as 5,000 B.C. The tradition, surprisingly enough, began as a pagan custom, long before Christianity was a reality.

The egg symbolized the world to the pagans, and the color red represented the "force of life." Pagans exchanged eggs as tokens of goodwill at great spring festivals held each year. Festivals celebrated the beginning of a new year and renewal of life, new crops and a new food supply.

The Christian era brought forth the new faith, and the Apostles were confronted with eliminating customs that conflicted with their new religion. But Christians chose to adopt spring celerations and colored eggs at Easter. The egg became a Christian symbol for renewal of life, representing the Resurrection of Christ, and red symbolized Christ's blood shed on the cross.

As time passed, colored eggs included all colors of the rainbow. Coloring eggs has become universal, but the egg's meaning varies throughout the world.

Many unusual Easter egg customs originated in Europe. "Pace-egging" was popular at Easter time in England. Children dressed up in costumes much like we do at Halloween, and went from door to door asking for Easter eggs. The object was to see how many colored eggs the children could collect.

In some parts of England, colored eggs were used for sending elaborately decorated Easter messages of love. These are highly prized and have become treasured family heirlooms, handed down from generation to generation.

In Italy, large quantities of colored eggs were blessed in chruch on Easter eve. These blessed eggs were the first nourishment taken after Lent. Each family kept a "charger" with as many as two to three hundred colored eggs. Every guest was invited to eat an Easter egg during the week following Easter.

The Easter Egg has been a symbol of life for nearly 7,000 years, not only as a source of life, but as a source for a healthy life.

Flower demonstration planned

LANCASTER — A demonstration of flower arranging in the colonial manner will be presented Thursday, April 23 at 1:30 p.m. at the Farm and Home Center.

The demonstration, entitled "Spring," will be presented by Claude Jones, Jr., a florist from Williamsburg, Virginia.

Jones, who does extensive work with colonial Williamsburg, recently demonstrated at the Williamsburg Garden Symposium. He was featured with his arrangements in the January-February, 1980, issue of Colonial Homes magazine.

The program is being presented by the Farm and Home Foundation and the Green Acres Garden Club and will be open to the public free of charge.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Okay friends, the time has come to de-bunk another of those great American myths.

Easter eggs are not mass produced by that fuzzy, adorable little Easter Bunny.

Nosiree. Just lay that old idea away to rest.

Let me tell you where those Easter eggs do originate.

They're being individually crafted by a brigade of feisty bantam hens staked out at various posts in our old barn.

No Easter Bunny could ever hop through Spring with more single-purposeness than these biddies. Their lone, all-consuming mission in life at the moment is to produce, produce, produce.

Nothing will deter them.

Cats idling by their nests win a low growl that rumbles from beneath an awesome puffed-up chest of feathers. Any cat not taking that clear-out hint, or poking a bewhiskered nose within pecking distance, will likely come away wounded.

And dogs deserve equal treatment. Or worse.

Humans, though, pose an even worse threat to these non-stop, non-unionized, production-oriented poultry friends.

Two-legged pests that they are, humans are hen home-wreckers. They are totally unsympathetic with a hen's need to round out a hollow in the straw beneath the heifer feeder where one can spread wings over the security of a nest of twenty warm, promising eggs.

No. Those rascals persist in pilfering the production.

Or let a hen set up housekeeping on the bale of hay stacked next to the heifer pen door. Not only does the egg get lifted, someone adds insult to injury by feeding the nest to the bawling calves.

Knowing the seasonal demand for the hens' output, we'll just continue to swipe the goods as we find them.

But if you run smack up against an egg shortage this weekend, you can figure those hens finally outsmarted the cats, dogs and yours truly by taking off to raise a family in parts unknown.

And to think we have the nerve to call these birds "chicken."

Eggs or no eggs — have a Happy Easter!

Three to receive highest 4-H award

WASHINGTON — Three men received the "National Partner-in-4-H Award", 4-H's highest recognition during the 51st National 4-H Conference at the National 4-H Center here this past week.

Winners are Donald Wildrick, president of Wildrick and Miller, an advertising-public relations agency in New York City; Kenneth B. Hoyt, director of the Office of Career Education, U.S. Department of Education, Washington, D.C.; and U.S. Senator Larry Pressler of South Dakota.

The award recognizes "exemplary, significant and distinctive contributions to the 4-H program over a period of years," said Eugene Williams, deputy administrator for 4-H in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Science and Administration-Extension.

Wildrick was cited for his contributions and service to 4-H through encouraging private sector involvement in 4-H programs, including awards, educational materials, corporate leadership and technical assistance.

Hoyt was honored for providing resources to encourage 4-H involvement in economics, jobs and career programs, and for making possible 4-H involvement in national career education consultations and studies.

Senator Pressler, a former 4-H member, was chosen for the honor because of his contributions to furthering 4-H youth programs, for continuing participation in 4-H activities and support of resources for 4-H. He will address the closing session Friday.

More than 300 delegates from 46 states, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and the District of Columbia attended the conference. They represent more than 5 million 4-H members and 575,000 adult 4-H volunteer leaders across the nation.

Ten delegates from Canada are participating as a part of the Canada-United States 4-H exchange program.

Country art exhibit opens next week

BLOOMSBURG — A collection of drawings and paintings depicting rural and farming scenes will be exhibited at Bloomsburg State College from April 22 to May 8.

The collection, entitled "Country Reflections," is by Carol Slusser Fraind, an elementary art teacher in the Berwick School District, and her students.

A wide variety of agricultural and rural themes are found in the collection, which will be on exhibit in Kehr Union on the college campus.

Among the paintings are the three which accompany this article.

"Old Fashioned Irish" is a portrait of Patrick Finan, who once farmed a large homestead in the Dushore area. The homesteader's granddaughter related many anecdotes to the artist of helping to work the acreage and tend the livestock. The artist characterizes Finan as the "total embodiment of Irish pride and dedication to the land."

"The Refuge" depicts an abandoned wagon covered with a mantle of snow, which is offering refuge to a wild rabbit.

"Waiting for Spring" shows a pair of work horses lazily standing in a snowy barnyard obviously waiting for the change of seasons.

Ms. Fraind, who says she is very proud of her farming heritage, now lives on a 20-acre farm, which she bought from her parents at R4 Berwick.

Her eventual ambition is to raise Belgian horses on the farm. Many of her paintings reflect her strong love for horses, particularly the large work horses.

The artist spent most of her years of teaching in small schools with predominantly rural population. She describes the rural students as more resourceful and kind.

Waiting for Spring

Old Fashioned Irish

Following studying for six summers at Kutztown State College, she obtained her Pennsylvania art teaching credentials. Her greatest artistic influence while studying at Kutztown was Mrs. Rose Marie Sloat, some of whose paintings hang in the National Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C.

"Watercolor is my favorite medium to work in despite its difficult and unforgiving nature," she explains.

"After much practice and a great deal of patience, watercolor finally will yield unparalleled atmospheric and lighting effects.

"Also, since my paintings must be wedged into a busy schedule, I appreciate the ease and quickness of working that it offers."

Due to her agricultural heritage, the artist also has an interest in farm preservation other than capturing it for future generations

Howes showed slides on the 4-H program in Pennsylvania with emphasis on getting teens and their parents involved in 4-H clubs and keeping them involved. The dinner was attended by 4-H leaders, teen leaders and bankers who help sponsor the dinner each year

Potter County extension director Samuel Crossley presented a $100 scholarship award to Leo Dunn whose essay on "What 4-H Has Meant to Me" and "Why I Want This Scholarship" was selected by a panel of judges from the 4-H Expansion and Review Committee.

Junior leader awards were presented by 4-H advisor Susan McCaslin and Expansion and Review Committee member Nick Reitter to Nancy Pratt, Robin Watterson, Shinglehouse, Carol Minnemeyer, Little Genesee, N.Y. and Leo Dunn, Coudersport, three years; Deb Buchanan, James Babcock, Susan Pratt, Shinglehouse and Marie Erway, Genesee, one year.

Awards to leaders and junior leaders who did not attend the banquet will be presented at a later date

Currently serving on the 4-H Expansion and Review Committee are Jack Moshier, Leona Ruter, Sharie Saulter, Betty Leet and Commissioner Tom Bowman, Coudersport, Donna Thomas, Ulysses; Nick Reitter, Janet Erway and the Reverend David Ford, Genesee, Karl Torrey, Shinglehouse, who work with extension staff members, Sam Crossley, Edith Reisler and Susan McCaslin in planning all 4-H programs for the county.

Carroll L. Howes, Assistant Pennsylvania State 4-H Leader, left, is shown congratulating Leo Dun, Coudersport, member of the Goldminers 4-H club. Leo was presented with a $100 scholarship for his winning essay on "What 4-H Has Meant To Me" at the annual 4-H leaders and bankers dinner for Potter County, held recently at the Penn York Camp, Ulysses.

Montgomery equine council to begin second year

LANSDALE — The Montgomery County Equine Council begins its second year with activities of interest to horse owners.

All horse enthusiasts are invited to the spring meeting, which is open to the public, on Tuesday, April 28, 7:30 p.m., at the 4-H Center near Lansdale.

Richard Goerlitz of Newville, will give an illustrated talk and answer questions on freeze branding of horses. Goerlitz is a franchised representive for KYPO Kinetics Inc. from the state of Washington.

If enough interest is shown that evening, the Council will sponsor a freeze branding clinic at a later date, at reduced costs, for those interested in their horses having a lifetime identification. It has been reported to the Council that several horses have been stolen in Montgomery County in the past two months.

Freeze branding could be one deterent to theft and certainly a method of recovery if theft should happen.

Also featured at the April 28 meeting will be a beautiful film on the Chief Joseph Ride.

Bob Krauss of the Green Lane area, a Council Board Member, has ridden the entire ride and will narrate and discuss the program. He notes that it takes 10 years to complete the entire ride.

This presentation is a must for anyone who enjoys trail riding.

The Montgomery County 4-H Center is located on Snyder Road off Route 363 near North Penn High School, Lansdale. The evening program is open to all, free of charge. Anyone desiring to join the Council or renew their membership for 1981 can do so by donating their fee of $2, payable that night. Membership cards will also be issued.

4-H'ers clown around

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LANCASTER — Lancaster 4-H'ers are often called dedicated, creative, enthusiastic and ambitious, but in the future they may be called a bunch of clowns. That is, if Nancy Myers, 4-H agent, gets her say in the matter.

Known across the county for initiating numerous new projects for Lancaster 4-H, Myers has decided to make her newest project opportunity for 4-H'ers, clowning.

After a county workshop Tuesday night, a regional workshop in York County and much studying on the subject, Myers has found clowning to be much more than having fun at a circus.

Though it may be a far cry from the normal 4-H project of dairy, swine, cooking and sewing, clowning is a growing project in Pennsylvania and one which demands serious attention.

At a regional 4-H spring fling workshop in York County, recently, members of Lebanon County's clowning 4-H presented their side of the clowning trade. Tuesday night, Mial Hillhouse, a member of the Professional Clown's Club of America, spoke to interested 4-H'ers on his art.

"Milo," as Hillhouse is known professionally, began by telling the history of clowning and worked his way up to costumes and makeup for the modern clown.

All 4-H'ers interested in clowning should know that clowning is recognized as a profession and an art today and that years of clowning have led to this status.

The earliest recognized clowns were court jesters of the Middle Ages. They performed tricks and told stories while entertaining royalty. Their costumes were usually trimmed with noisy bells.

Harlequin clowns appeared in the Italian theatre of the 16th century. Their faces were covered with black half-masks and tights covered their legs.

The first clown to wear white face makeup was the Pierrot. This clown had big pompoms like huge buttons on their loose fitting white tops. Also, their hats usually came to a point.

Today, the modern clowns fall into three categories:

The white face clown makes his face with white grease paint as a base and then adds other bright colors according to his chosen character.

The second type of clown is known as the Auguste. He is usually a clumsy individual who trips over everything. Charlie Chaplin is the most famous Auguste clown. He wears little makeup.

The third, and perhaps most famous, is the hobo or tramp. This character is usually sad and lonely and usually works in audiences alone. This is the only type of clown which can appear untidy and still be a hit with the audience.

All clowns in the circus are called Joey, after Joseph Grimaldi, the first of the great modern clowns. Grimaldi first appeared in the early 1800's in London, England.

Andrew Leader speaks to 4-H'ers at their regional 4-H spring fling in York County. Being a clown is more than just a funny face to this dedicated clown.

"Let's see, there was a reason I'm at the 4-H workshop. Was it to talk about swine or capons maybe?"

To be a successful clown, Milo advised carrying a good supply of makeup, baby powder and mirrors. The faces and costumes a clown can wear are ended only by the imagination according to Milo.

But being a clown is more than painting on a face and wearing a funny costume according to Barbara O'Neill, Somerset County 4-H agent. Professional clowns have a strict code of ethics and a great variety of opportunities to perform.

Though Milo works for the Shriner's Circus in Harrisburg, he also has performed in hospitals, at small parties and even at adult gatherings for just 5 or 6 people. Farm banquets, 4-H meetings, and society gatherings could be just a few of the events any clown could add to his list.

And if you think clowning involves just walking around looking funny, think back to your last circus. Those clowns didn't just stand there did they? Clowning in 4-H also involves learning to write skits, making balloon animals, learning to act, and working with other clowns.

As a 4-H clown you'll finally have the chance to act foolish in front of people and make them happy with out them knowing who you are. If you are interested in clowning for Lancaster County, call Nancy Myers at 394-6851, or call the 4-H agent in your county and get a clown project started.

Mial Hillhouse discusses the art of clowing to interested 4-H'ers in Lancaster County.

"I wonder why everyone is pointing at us," these characters seem to be saying, for to them clowning is a serious 4-H project with many side benefits. One of which is making people laugh.

Just another face in the crowd

Order 4 base decreases because of record production

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine last Friday announced a March 1981 base milk price of $14.06 per hundredweight and excess milk price of $12.51.

The weighted average March price was $14.02 and the butterfat differential for the month was 16.9 cents

The weighted average price declined five cents from February, marking the first monthly decrease in almost one year. The March base milk price dropped 12 cents from the February level.

The advertising withholding rate, which is deducted from the base and excess milk price and not the weighted average price, was 13 cents a hundredweight and the amount withheld totaled over $672 thousand.

The gross value of producer milk during March was $72.4 million, compared to $61.2 million a year ago.

Shine said producer receipts totaled 517.0 million pounds during March and were at a record high level, exceeding the previous high by over 11 million pounds.

Milk production was up over 42 million pounds or nine percent from last March. Production increased seasonally by almost two percent from February, on a daily basis.

Class I producer milk totaled 253.1 million pounds and accounted for 48.96 percent of total producer milk receipts during the month, down from 49.93 percent in February and 51.64 percent last March.

Base milk accounted for 88.98 percent of total producer milk receipts in March compared to 85.35 in February and 90.14 percent a year ago.

There were 7371 producers supplying 65 Order 4 pool handlers during the month. The number of Order 4 producers was up by 211 from last March.

The average daily delivery per producer of 2263 pounds was 124 pounds or 5.8 percent above a year ago. The average butterfat test of producer milk was 3.75 percent for the month, compared to 3.80 percent in February and 3.74 percent one year earlier.

Middle Atlantic Order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 214.7 million pounds during March, a drop of 0.9 percent from last March, after adjustment to eliminate variation due to calendar composition to a Calumet liquid manure spreader with soil injector.

Livestock manure is valuable. So it makes sense to keep as much of that value in the ground as possible. A Calumet 2 or 4-shank soil injector does just that. Teamed with a Calumet liquid manure spreader, the injector puts manure as deep as 12 inches. This can help retain four times the nitrogen that's lost with surface application, as well as reduce odors and runoff.

How to boost lettuce profits

COLLEGE PARK, Md — Lettuce growers can increase profits with a new method of fungicide application which uses less pesticide and, at the same time, improves yields Profits for lettuce growers usually can be increased by $300 to $400 per acre, Peter B Adams said Friday at a meeting of the Potomac Division of the American Phytopathology Society.

His research shows that lowering the amount of a commercial formulation of metham (32.7 per cent active ingredient) from 75-100 gallons per acre (as recommended by the manufacturer) to 25 gallons of the product per acre, reduced losses due to lettuce drop to two percent. This contrasts favorably with 19 percent losses in untreated-fields, reported Adams, working at USDA's Science and Education Administration.

The higher amount of metham application is very costly for use on large areas. And Adams, in cooperation with J. Kirkun, a visiting scientist from Israel, found that the lower concentrations of metham (sodium methyldithiocarbamate) were even more effective in destroying the fungus that causes lettuce drop, Sclerotinia minor.

The tests were first done in laboratories at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center. Then field tests were performed in New Jersey, with the assistance of S A Johnson and J F. Carpenter of Rutgers Research and Development Center. In this second phase, Adams and colleagues demonstrated that by mixing metham with irrigation water and saturating the fields, less fungicide was needed to improve yields.

"Lettuce drop can be a problem wherever lettuce is grown in the United States," said Adams. The fungus Sclerotinia minor attacks and blocks the stem at ground level, preventing water and nutrients from reaching the lettuce leaves They wilt and the plant literally drops to the ground

Since the fungus thrives on lettuce, plowing disease plants into the field can increase the number of disease-producing organisms in the soil. Therefore, lettuce growers minimize losses by planting lettuce in the same field only once every three to five years

Growers also fumigate lettuce fields two weeks before planting to kill any fungus that remains in the soil. A gaseous fungicide like DD mixture (a mixture of chlorinated three-carbon hydrocarbons) is "shanked-in"-pumped into the soil through an eight-inch spike or shank that is dragged through the field.

The new method of fungicide [illegible] y A [illegible] ms is efficient and low in cost, but it requires a good water supply. Any type of conventional sprinkler irrigation system can be used to apply the fungicide, said Adams.

"Simply mix metham into the irrigation water and saturate the soil until it is wet to a depth of eight inches. This usually takes about four hours," he said.

Because it is simple, the new method will undoubtedly be used in greenhouses to apply metham to produce disease-free seedlings, Adams noted.

Research plans for metham application by irrigation include studies of its effectiveness in controlling other plant diseases such as Verticillium wilt of potatoes, damping-off fungi, and white rot of onions, as well as controlling other pests, like weeds and nematodes.

The satisfaction that comes from doing a good job of farming

Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range A good pasture with a pH of 6 5 or higher for example will make 300 to 400 lbs of beef per acre and produce up to $100 gross income per acre This means with the help of lime profits from pastures can compare favorably with feed or grain crops

USDA reports heavy comment on bankrupt elevator issue

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Public comment and recommendations submitted to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's elevator task force working group on the problems farmers have with bankrupt grain elevators have been "intense and heavy," according to Edward Hews, acting administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Hews, chairman of the task force to review current warehouse laws and regulations, also said Wednesday was the deadline for comments to be received.

"Both correspondence and phone calls have shown four specific areas of interest," Hews said.

"These are: concern over possible threats to the integrity and validity of warehouse receipts, recommendations to establish an insurance or indemnity program to protect farmers, suggestions for tighter warehouse controls and bonding requirements, and suggestions for possible bankruptcy law changes to protect producers who have grain stored in insolvent elevators," he said.

The working group was formed March 5. Requests for comments were published in the March 17 Federal Register.

Hews said the working group has been meeting with representatives of trade groups concerned, including grain co-ops and country elevator committees, and more such meetings are planned.

Secretary of Agriculture John Block, Assistant Secretary C.W. McMillan and other USDA representatives, testified April 6 before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee, which will be holding hearings on the bankrupt elevator matter.

Watusi cattle are horning way into U. S.

CALHAN, Colo. — Looking for something a little different in the cattle business? Tired of the same old breeds in your barn? If these are your sentiments, you might want to look into something guaranteed to bring traffic to a halt at the pasture fence — that is the Watusi, with cows whose horns measure 70 inches tip to tip and 17 inches in circumference.

"Amazingly enough, these cattle can manuever their giant horns around as well as any Texas Longhorn, in and out of breeding chutes with no trouble at all," said Darol Dickinson, owner and purebred Texas Longhorn breeder

"This unique breed of cattle was first introduced to the United States in the 1930's," he said

Now approximately 108 head are in the U.S., mostly on game farms and in zoos Dickinson, owner of one of the first commercial herds, praises the cattle's gentle dispositions and their traits of high browse utilization, disease resistance, calving ease and exceptional horn growth.

Linda Dickinson, of Calhan, Colorado, hand feeds this Watusi cow whose horns span 70 inches from tip to tip. The circumference of the horns at the base is an impressive 17 inches. Needless to say, the gentle bovine commands a lot of respect.

These African Watusi cattle, are among 108 head in the United States today. They are known for their tremendous horn length, high browse utilization, disease resistance, calving ease and longevity. In Africa they withstand temperatures from 20° at nightfall to 120° during the day.

Watusi cattle originate from the Central Highlands of Africa, an area of very low quality browse, vegetation, and foliage where they survive extreme overgrazing of the land, stockwater shortage, and highly infectious disease problems.

"Watusi cattle are the world's fastest and largest horn developers — their large outswept horns grow twice as fast as any other breed of cattle, even the Texas Longhorns," said Dickinson.

Longevity is another outstanding trait, with Watusis having a life span of 18-22 years. They have small calves, offering an excellent future in cross breeding for first calf heifers. Their color is usually dark red, but ranges from brown to dun or even spotted.

One of the unique traits of the Watusi is the 7-8 percent butterfat found in the milk, more than most dairy cattle in the United States.

"The milk is considered very nutritious by an African tribe, the Watusi, whose diet includes a drink which is a mixture of cow's milk and blood," said Dickinson.

The Watusi tribe is considered the tallest race of people, with adult males reaching 7 feet tall. Watusi natives consider their cattle sacred and will not eat their meat.

When importing the Watusi from Africa, they must spend one year under quarantine in England and additional years in Sweden. Calves born in Sweden are eligible for U.S. import. During this time, they're constantly tested to insure they enter the U.S. disease free.

Dickinson, who plays an important role in the promotion of Texas Longhorn cattle, believes there is an exciting future for this unique breed. He acquired his first Watusi in December, 1978 and now has a breeding program using embryo transfer along with artificial insemination.

For the first time, Watusi semen is available from Dickinson Ranch for $15 an ampule. The semen has been collected from "Jimmy the Swede", a four year old bull imported from Sweden in 1979.

The roping industry will have a lot to look forward to next year as the first Watusi cross-breds hit the ground and start growing.

"There has been a real shortage of big horned cattle," said Dickinson. The ability of Watusi horns to grow at such a rapid rate gives the roping industry a bright new future. Watusi-crosses have enough horn at an early age to be used much sooner than any other breed of cattle."

Presently, there is no Watusi registry. But who knows, with the popularity this breed has gained in just a short period of time—when the word Watusi is mentioned in the future, people will think cattle, not dancing!

For more information on Watusi semen availability contact: Dickinson Ranch, R2, Calhan, Colorado 80808; phone 303/683-2655.

Reduced tillage needs proper equipment

KEWANEE, Ill. — Farmers practicing a comprehensive reduced tillage program need to select cultivation tools designed to operate effectively in heavy crop residue, according to Howard Hadler, Division Engineer for Kewanee Machinery.

The rotary hoe is a prime example of a cultivation implement that needs to be selected specifically for the tillage program in which it is going to be used, says Hadler. This is particularly true for fields that have been planted to corn the previous year and have stalks remaining on the surface.

Surface residue is a major challenge to effective rotary hoe operation. Halder points to several major rotary hoe design features important in coping with heavy crop residue. Among these are gangs and wheels designed to be self-cleaning; balanced design for optimum use of implement weight, and low maintenance.

Spacing of hoe wheels on each gang and how the gangs work with each other is a crucial design factor.

"When the wheels on the front gang are interspaced with wheels from the back gang, they establish a self-cleaning effect," Hadler explains. "They're less likely to plug since each gang of hoe wheels is ground driven as a unit. Consequently, one gang constantly cleans crop residue from the other as they move across the field."

An implement designed to make the most effective use of its own weight is also important, particularly in crusty soil or heavy crop residue situations, according to Hadler.

Caravan of coolers delivers ham

HERSHEY — A caravan of ten tractor trailers loaded with milk coolers rolled into the parking lot here at the Hershey Motor Lodge on Sunday evening. Along with their precious cargo of stainless steel dairy equipment, the truckers delivered a Missouri ham from the state's Department of Agriculture Secretary Jim Boillot to Pennsylvania's Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell.

According to lead driver Bill Johnston, who presented the ham to Hallowell, the caravan left Missouri at 10 a.m. on Saturday morning, drove the 1000 miles to Pennsylvania through rain and fog, and arrived in Hershey at 6:30 p.m. on Sunday. The cross-country trip was part of the Paul Mueller Company's efforts to save money for their distributors and the farmers they serve

In order to save energy, the Missouri-based company decided to take annual meetings and workshops to their distributors instead of having the distributors travel to the Springfield plant. The workshops for the Northeast were held this week in Hershey.

Since Pennsylvania farmers had ordered the company's coolers and since the company's personnel were traveling to the Keystone state, Mueller officials decided to transport the coolers freight free, saving Keystone state customers about $40,000 in freight expenses. Company distributors for the Northeast met in Hershey this week.

amounting to savings of about $40,000, according to a company spokesperson. A total of 27 truck loads made the trip — representing a $700,000 investment by Pennsylvania dairy producers.

The Mueller Company is one of the world's largest manufacturers of milk coolers for farm use. — SM

The Mueller Company shipped in a cargo of milk coolers ordered by Pennsylvania farmers valued at $700,000. The company delivered the coolers as part of an energy saving effort

Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell accepts a Missouri ham presented by lead driver Bill Johnson — a gift from Missouri's Secretary of Agriculture Jim Boillot. The ham traveled interstate with a caravan of milk coolers. Looking on is Jim Wickersham, director of marketing for the Paul Mueller Company.

Follow safe food buying tips

LITITZ — With the cost of food soaring skyward, selecting food that is fresh and safe is essential. For most consumers, this process begins at the supermarket.

Miss Trudy Dougherty, extension home economist of The Chester County Cooperative Extension Service offers some food safety guidelines to follow. Whenever possible, check "open dates" for product freshness she stresses. Avoid products that show any signs of food spoilage as indicated below:

Frozen food:

Old packaging indicates food may have been stored long enough to have deteriorated in color, flavor, texture and nutritive value.

Excessive frost indicates product has thawed and been refrozen, again lessening quality.

A broken package probably means contents are dried and discolored.

Meat:

Ready-to-eat hams, stored along the edges of refrigeration units may have been exposed to undesirably high temperatures and therefore contain excessive amounts of bacteria.

Buy canned hams that say they should be refrigerated only if they are displayed in refrigerated storage units.

Canned food:

Do not buy:

Cans or jars with bulging ends (the exceptions are beer and carbonated beverages); this includes cans with bulging lids caused by severe dents.

Cans or jars with visible signs of leakage.

Pull-top containers with obvious cracks on lid, or glass containers showing signs of loosening or opening of closures.

Badly rusted cans with deep pits near point of perforation. Canned foods that contain only slight dents with only slightly crushed sides are generally safe. Also acceptable are cans with small rustspots easily removed without damage to the can.

Fresh fruits and vegetables:

Avoid moldy or rusty fruits and vegetables even if only a small amount of mold is present. Signs of mold indicate it has already penetrated the food

Booklet traces tobacco history

LANCASTER — Pennsylvania, home of the Pennsylvania Dutch, coal mines and steel mills, gave birth also to a tobacco specialty, Pennsylvania seedleaf

Today, this distinctive leaf, once used as cigar filler but in recent years largely in chewing tobacco, is grown almost exclusively in Lancaster County. And at least half is cultivated by Amish farmers, descendants of those who settled in Lancaster's rolling hills 300 years ago.

This and more is detailed in an illustrated pamphlet, "Pennsylvania and Tobacco," published by The Tobacco Institute, a Washington-based trade association representing the major U.S. cigarette manufacturers The booklet is one of a series on the history, culture and economic importance of America's first export product.

Tobacco in the Keystone State predated the arrival of the Amish However, early attempts in the 17th century under Dutch, Swedish and English rule to grow export tobacco failed, because the emigres were working the wrong areas with the wrong seeds and the European market was oversupplied by other colonies

The ensuing years, from Philadelphia's emergence as a tobacco manufacturing center and port to a York County farmer's experiment which started the seedleaf industry, are detailed in The Institute's colorful account.

Today, the booklet notes, some 2500 tobacco farms clustered in Lancaster and spilling into surrounding counties produce more than 22 million pounds of heavy-bodied, dark Pennsylvania seedleaf. With a value of $15 million in 1979, the Keystone State's tobacco crop ranked 13th in the nation

Tobacco, which largely defies mechanization, is still mostly worked by hand as it was a century ago, according to the booklet While some farmers in the early 1970's switched to less labor-intensive crops to cut costs, the Amish, with their large families and doctrine of hard work, are staying with tobacco.

But the sturdy and practical old-world farmers and their families are only one part of tobacco's continuing story in Pennsylvania.

The Keystone State leads the nation in cigar making, producing one-third of all U.S cigars.

According to the 24-page booklet, cigarettes sold in the state add more than $259 million yearly in state tax revenues to the general fund, as well as some $115 million to the U.S. Treasury The more than 95,000 retail outlets that sold almost $1.2 billion worth of tobacco products in 1979 provide jobs and additional tax revenues for the state, as do the tobacco wholesalers who distribute products worth more than three-quarters of a billion dollars.

Copies of "Pennsylvania and Tobacco' are available free of charge from The Tobacco Institute, 1875 I Street, N.W., Washington, D.C 20006.

"Why Commonwealth National cares as much about promoting YOUR business as we do our own."

Bob Bucher V P
Agri-Loan Department

"At Commonwealth National we know that good business for farmers means good business for us. That's why our Agri-Loan Department must see you through the rough times as well as the smooth. It takes people like us to do that—people who understand farmers. Three of our four lending officers, in fact, grew up on farms. We know that farming is a big business as well as a difficult business which often requires big investments.

Pennsylvania's largest agri-lender.

"Today, Commonwealth National has more funds committed to agricultural business development than any other bank in Pennsylvania. In just 10 years our agricultural loan portfolio has grown from $11 million to almost $63 million. So it makes good sense for us to do everything we can to insure that the agricultural economy of Central Pennsylvania is strong . . . and that you stay in business.

"Our concern for your success, as you can see, goes far beyond providing you with operating funds. We offer guidance and counsel on everything from more efficient means of ordering agrichemicals to new markets for your products. We may ever oe able to give you advice on holding off on a major capital expenditure until the time is right. If you're looking for our help on the financial side of farming, just give us a call. We'll be happy to drive out and talk things over.

Product promotions throughout the year.

"Meanwhile, we'll help insure you'll have a successful farm business by continuing to develop strong markets for your products. One of the ways we plan to do this is to celebrate May as 'Egg Month' by sponsoring 'Brunch at the Bank'. It will feature a giant five-foot omelet that the public will be invited to eat outside our offices at 28 Penn Square starting at noon, Friday, May 1. Omelet cookbooks will help produce more interest in the tastier uses of eggs. And later on in the month, omelet-making demonstrations will be held at four of our offices.

"Commonwealth National plans to continue with different farm product promotions such as this throughout the year.

"But above all, remember, you can call us at 717-291-3036 and ask for Agri-Loan information anytime."

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

BETHEL — What do the concrete medial barriers found on many area highways have in common with modern livestock management practices?

For one thing, both the barriers and products used in the care of livestock are likely to originate with a company located in the southwestern corner of Berks County.

That company is Concrete Safety Systems, of Bethel

Originally concentrating manufacturing primarily on the highway barriers, the company started adding a growing line of pre-cast concrete products for use on livestock farms beginning last fall.

Like the barriers, which have saved many a life on the highways, the farm products, such as cattle guards, feed bunks and waterers, also offer improved livestock safety among other management advantages

And, just as the manufacturing specifications used in the making of the barriers meet the stringent demands of high-speed highway driving, they also can satisfy agriculture's needs for sturdy construction, particularly where livestock are concerned.

"The quality of our concrete is at the basis of our products, both for the highway and the farm," explains Jay Robinson, vice president of sales for Concrete Safety Systems.

"We use high strength 5000 PSI concrete in all of our products. And all of them are reinforced with steel bars"

Robinson goes on to explain that the company maintains a full-time quality control department, which is in addition to the daily state inspection for the highway barriers

"Also, we use all steel forms in casting the products," Robinson said

The steel forms provide a better finish and more consistent tolerances in the products, he pointed out, which are both construction features of interest to farmers in the fabricating of waterers or feed bunks

Probably the most recognized farm product manufactured by Concrete Safety Systems is the Smith Cattleguard, which was first introduced in Virginia some two decades ago and has since expanded to more than 15,000 installations in 33 states

Licensed to manufacture the Smith Cattleguard in Pennsylvania, Concrete Safety Systems offers the one-piece, precast, steel-reinforced cattleguard installations in 12, 14 and 16-foot widths

The systems are designed to carry loads that are comparable to the legal limits set for highways

"Another of our products which has been well received on area farms are the feed bunks, both the centerline and fenceline types," Robinson points out

"We offer an extra deep trough that measures 15 inches deep," according to Robinson

"Our bunks also have concrete ends that bolt on, which permit the easy expansion of a system

"Another feature involves inserts which are cast into the bunks to allow for the bolting of fence to the feed trough"

A unique product now being offered in Pennsylvania by the Bethel firm is an automatic freeze-proof waterer, which can be utilized in both dairy or cattle operations

"Interest has been growing in this waterer," Robinson said

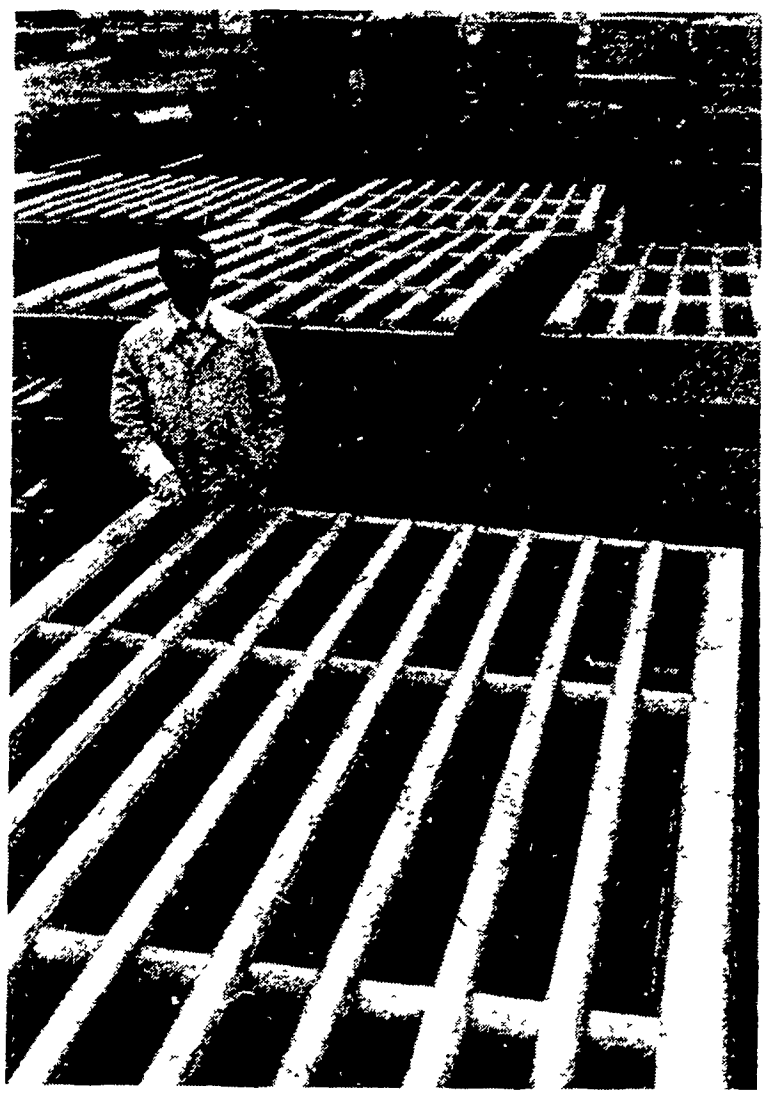
"It permits sealing off a farm pond for safety and sanitation reasons and provides a year-round source of water for the livestock"

The waterer can be installed on either a pressure system in barnyards or feed lots or in the bank of a pond.

A combination of circulating water in the concrete tank and earthen covering over part of the system, which acts as insulation, provides year-round watering facilities In the summer, the insulating qualities also serve to keep the water cooler and promote higher livestock intake

The freeze-proof waterer was developed in 1978 in Missouri in cooperation with the Soil Conservation Service.

(Turn to Page C36)



Smith cattleguards, awaiting installation on area livestock farms, are among the best known of precast products manufactured by Concrete Safety Systems. Concrete is of the same high strength 5000 PSI quality used in making highway medial barriers.

Jay Robinson, vice president of sales for Concrete Safety Systems, of Bethel, examines tank portion of freeze-proof waterer, which recently was cast in plant. Other farm products include stock tanks, cattleguards and feed bunks.

Know your family's financial affairs

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — Do you know your net worth? Can you tell within $15 how your money is spent each month? Do you know the difference between your fixed income and your net income?

If you know the answers to these questions, you are probably on sound financial footing. If you have questions about these and other points which relate to the money your family makes and spends, you may need to spend some time putting your family's financnes in order.

At a workshop held last week Lancaster County Extension Home Economist Doris Thomas said that families who seem to have what they need are probably very good at planning. She stressed that one of the first things a family must determine is what the financial goals for their family are. Goals, of course, vary from family to family, but having your goals firmly in mind will help you reach financial security.

She said, "How a family meets its needs depends on its values." Values, in turn, depend largely on the family in which you were raised.

In determining the financial goals of your family, Doris said families must decide what their needs are for the next five years and for the next ten years.

A first step in achieving good financial planning is to develop a long range spending plan. To do this will involve some work and research. First, she said, "You must know your income and your bills and you must keep records."

Providing worksheets for participants, Doris explained to them how to determine their family's spendable income, something which can be difficult when commissions are involved. She then suggests recording all fixed expenses on a calendar and by subtracting fixed expenses from spendable income you can determine the amount of money left for flexible spending.

A budget with proposed spending and actual spending will help keep close record of where your money is going. After one month of close record keeping it will be possible to see if your spending plan is realistic, and if it isn't, make proper adjustments.

Doris suggested, "Make it a practice to have savings listed as a fixed expense, no matter how small the amount." She pointed out that financial advisors suggest having three months' income available as savings to contend with unexpected loss of employment, appliance repairs or unexpected medical bills.

She added, "Many families find their fixed expenses and their spendable income are very close." Good records will not only record spendable income, fixed expenses and flexible expenses, but tax-deductible expenses as well. This will be especially valuable at income tax time.

Doris pointed out that a good manager is one who is able to effectively use all the resources in a family. Family resources include skills, such as gardening which allow a family to stretch its income; energy, which members can put to achieving such things as household chores, meal preparation and laundry; wisdom; and faith and love.

She recognized that money is important in this society in which work is exchanged for money to purchase the family's necessities. However, she noted that money can be a powerful force, stirring feelings of fear (of not having any), suspicion, guilt, power, status, security and approval.

She encouraged families to make a net worth statement, which will give them a complete picture of their financial state. A net worth statement will include everything the family owns, including the cash value of life insurance, and annuities as well as the obvious real estate, furniture, antiques, savings accounts, stocks, bonds and other assets. There must also be a listing of what the family owes, such as mortgages, loans and other debts. Subtracting total debts from total assets will show the net financial worth of the family.

She cautioned families against the excessive use of their plastic credit cards, which can get them into deep financial trouble. Nevertheless she said, "You need to establish credit early, even though it goes against the grain of money who grew up not buying something until they had the money for it."

While good financial records are important to a family's well-being, another important aspect of family management is managing very important papers.

Many papers need to be kept in a safe deposit box at the bank, but insurance policies should be kept at home so they can be reviewed periodically. She added, "If you have not reviewed your homeowners' policy recently and increased it, you should consider it." She pointed out that some policies now carry an automatic increase to keep up with inflation.

Collectibles such as sterling silver, jewelry and glassware are protected under the average homeowners policy only up to $500, according to Doris. She suggested that homeowners who have property of that nature should have a "floater to their policy to be completely insured." This will require an independent appraisal, which is not expensive.

Wills should also be reviewed periodically as life situations change. An unsigned copy of the will should be kept with important papers in the home with a signed copy in a safe deposit box.

Doris suggested that everyone make an inventory of their home, listing furniture and other belongings for insurance purposes. Forms are available from insurance companies for this purpose, or the information can be recorded on cassette tapes. Pictures in addition to the list could be vital, and should be stored in a safe deposit box.

A sound assessment of your finances and efficient managing of your personal papers will mean increased sense of security for all members of the family.

York Holstein breeders visit Perry County

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

PERRY COUNTY — Mother Nature rolled out the green grass carpeting under a warm spring sunshine last Tuesday as a busload of York County Holstein breeders arrived here for their annual visit to neighboring black and white herds.

Stops on the day-long bus tour included four of Perry County's top type and production herds: Milmay Farms, operated by David and Dave Roth Jr.; Blain-View Farms, Mary and Nevin Rice and family; Ray-Mc Farms, Ray McMillen and sons; and the Dumbelle Farms of Shayne and Tom Dum III.

Milmay Farm is one of Perry County's oldest registered Holstein herds, dating back to the early 1900's, when Dave Roth's father-in-law purchased four cows.

Roth entered the dairying picture in 1928, with a dozen milking animals. Then last year, Dave Jr., and his wife Judy, took over management of the family dairy herd, becoming the fourth generation in the family to live on the beautiful valley homestead farm.

Almost from Milmay's inception, the farm has been in the forefront of agriculture happenings in Perry County.

Milmay was the first herd to begin DHIA testing, back in 1923.

Perry County's first homebred Excellent cow was born and developed in this herd.

And the first strip cropping in the county was laid out on the slopes that gently surround the Milmay Valley, where conservation practices are a way of life; and those terraces and contours are still in use.

Top milk production is a must in this barn, where the nearly 60 cows racked up the second high herd average in the county in 1981. Current rolling herd average on 57 cows is over 19,600 with 744 of fat.

Grain is fed in the barn, according to production records, and cows are turned out regularly for silage and exercise at the "shaker-type" bunker feeder adjacent to the barn. Milking animals get about 45 pounds of corn silage and 25 pounds of the best quality hay available per day.

Strong-pedigreed individuals form the backbone of the Milmay breeding program and offspring of the various bloodlines have been sold into several states and numerous foreign countries.

Two bulls from the Roth herd have gone into service with American Breeders Service in Wisconsin. The most recent is Milmay Kingpin Elevation Bob, an Elevation son from a Kingpin dam.

"Bob" is now on the list of the top 50 Holstein bulls in the United States, carrying a plus of 1664-milk, 56-fat, 1.50 on type, and a Total Production Index of plus-536.

This Kingpin-Elevation crossing has resulted in numerous high-production, high-type animals, not just in the R.th herd, but in several of the other herds in visited Perry County as well.

Several daughters of the Charmcross bull are also doing well in the Roth milking string, and Dave praises them as "the highest testers in the barn."

To continue the tradition of high production and type, Roth's are now breeding popular sires like Jemini, Creek, Pace, Milestone, Persuader, Astronaut, and of course, continuing the proven success of Elevation.

In 1975, Dave added a new heifer raising area, and feedlot. He and Dave Jr., are thoroughly satisfied with a "tombstone" type feeder installed for the youngstock.

Heifers must slip their necks down between picket-fence-like divisions for access to the grains and forage piled in a center trough. These dividers prevent the animals from pushing and shoving each other away from the feed, and cut waste to virtually nothing.

The Roths have 165 acres on the farm, most of it used for feed production, with 45 acres of hay, 60 of corn and 15 of wheat, with the remaining in pasture and woodland.

For many years, Dave Roth Sr. has been a leader in numerous dairy-related organizations.

He was named a Master Farmer in 1957 and headed the state's Master Farmers group as president for two years. A Pennsylvania Holstein Association director for 15 years, he also held a seat on the executive committee for part of that time.

In 1951, Dave helped to organize the Perry County Soil Conservation District, and has been a director ever since, also serving as district chairman for several years.

Perry County's newest Master Farmer family hosted the Yorkers at their second stop, Blainview Farms, at Blain R1.

A stacker system handles dairy cow wastes at Dumbelle Farms. Manure from the barn gutters is elevated onto a stack, which is held in a cement block and concrete enclosure. The stacking enclosure has nine months holding capacity and a three-percent slope for liquids to drain toward one side where they can evaporate.

THIS GRAIN FARMER FINDS YOU CAN LOSE 25% OF YOUR CROP WHEN YOU HEAT DRY SHELLED CORN

You lose two ways When the grain elevator charges 2½ percent per point of moisture to dry shelled corn, you pay 25 percent of your crop in drying costs if you take the moisture content down ten points In addition, the corn you get back has shrunk in volume and feed value so you need to use more of the heat dried grain to fatten cattle and hogs and produce eggs

That's why Harold Weaver, RD 2, Newville, Pennsylvania, started to use the on-the-farm natural-dry grain storage system from Advanced Ag Systems This system uses the drying effect and the wind chill factor of moving air forced up through the newly harvested grain in the bin

Before we got the natural-dry, air-cooled storage bin two years ago, we were always selling our shelled corn out of the field at harvest time," Weaver said "When you thought you took 100 bushels to the elevator, you would find you got paid for only about 60 bushels when the check came in the mail Now we fill our 7500 bushel bin to the top, turn on the fans and let it dry out naturally No costly fuel bills No cracked, dusty, scorched grains Beautiful yellow kernels fit for any growing pig fattening steer or laying hen And our full bin of shelled corn shrank down only three inches last year "

Several neighbors have also tried feeding shelled corn from Weaver's natural-dry grain storage bin with excellent results John Nolt had problems with a pen of hogs that continuously fought among themselves They never seemed to be satisfied even though they had enough to eat When Nolt switched from heat-dried corn from the feed mill to natural-dry corn from Weaver's on-the-farm storage bin, the hogs stopped fighting within three days "It had to be the corn," Nolt said "That's the only thing we changed "

So if you find you also lose 25 percent of your crop when you take shelled corn from the field to the grain elevator, write for more information on how this natural-dry wind-chill factor system works Send your request to Advanced Ag Systems RD 2 Box 174, Elverson, PA 19520 Or call (215) 286-9118

Helms defines ideas in his farm bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Senator Jesse Helms, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, has introduced an omnibus farm bill covering the full range of agricultural commodity programs.

Known as the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981, SB884 is designed to build on and improve the current farm and food statutes which expire this year, Helms said

He said his proposed legislation marks a new advance toward a goal of reducing government interference in agriculture, while enhancing the farmer's opportunity to receive a fair profit in the marketplace

In touching on some of the highlights of the bill, Helms said, "My legislation will provide government loan rates for the major grains and soybeans calculated as a percentage of average market prices in recent years, except that the rates could not be less than the current loan levels This will add predictability to the calculation of loan rates while assuring that they will not interfere with market operations or force the government to acquire burdensome stocks"

For rice, cotton, and the major grains, the bill provides a more cost-effective paid land diversion to replace set-asides, and normal crop acreages, Helms said

Disaster payments are not reauthorized since these are to be replaced by the expanded Federal Crop Insurance program enacted in 1980, he said.

"A cornerstone of my legislation is a strengthened farmer-held reserve That, combined with the export enhancement features of the bill, is designed to allow farmers to earn a profit in the marketplace These provisions make target prices unnecessary," Helms said

Helms said, "My bill makes substantial commitments to further developing export markets abroad" The legislation provides an Agricultural Export Credit Revolving Fund and is authorized to facilitate loans on a continuing basis

The bill also calls for remedies to correct hardships caused by agricultural embargoes; Congressional veto of international bilateral commodity supply agreements; and standby export subsidies to counter unfair trading practices abroad

The Helms bill calls for reducing the annual outlay for food stamps by about $2.5 to $3 billion annually, while at the same time directing the remaining $10 billion-plus in the program to the most truly needy

Last week, Helms also introduced, by request, the Administration's version of its farm bill.

Helms said that while the Administration bill contained many provisions with which he is in basic agreement, the peanut section of the Administration's bill would be "devastating to thousands of peanut farmers."

Helms would retain the basics of the present peanut program, which operates at no cost to the taxpayers. The Administration's peanut title would eliminate allotments, reduce quotas, and cost some $12 million annually.

Holstein tour

80 registered Holsteins and has topped the 700-pounds-fat herd average for many years. In 1980, the herd DHIA records averaged 18,861 mik and 735 fat.

Mary's family originally owned the neatly-kept farm with its handsome stone house, located on a flat plain just outside the little village of Blain. When her husband died in 1957, Mary took over operation of the farm and the dairy herd. Son Nevin was still in school; and immediately following his graduation, he began taking over the farm responsibilities.

Early in March of this year, the Rice's opened the doors of the familiar stall barn to chase the herd into their new milking facility, a double-six herringbone Surge parlor, complete with automatic takeoff units.

"We really like it," says Nevin's wife, Ann, who helps their son George with most of the milking chores.

An interesting feature of the spanking new parlor is the non-slip floor for surer footing for the cows. Aluminum oxide chips were added to the concrete, to finish out to a non-slippery surface.

Unlike many parlor set-ups, no feed goes to the Rice herd during the milking. Instead, the herd is then run back into the stall barn and fed, with grain weights rationed according to computer readouts on milk production.

Visitors to the Rice herd are especially interested in a set of triplet cows by Elevation born in 1975. Named "Doe, "Rae", and Mea", the trio is from Blainview Kingpin Jody, another example of that successful Kingpin-Elevation crossing.

While carrying the trio, Judy milked a record of over 35,000 pounds of milk and then bounced back after the multiple-delivery to produce a hundred pounds daily for the following four months. And in a previous freshening, Jody delivered a healthy set of twin heifers.

Doe, Rae and Mea have lived up to the Rice's expectations. Each has completed records with over 1,000 pounds fat, and one has milked over 30,000 milk.

About 80 heifers are raised for replacements, housed in an airy free-stall heifer facility The Rices have also raised steers as a sideline, but now plan to switch from beef feeding to adding about 20 more cows to the milking string.

Most of the crops raised go into the silos and bins for the dairy herd. Cropping includes 125 acres of corn, 100 of alfalfa and mixed hays, and 60 acres of oats and wheat. The Rices are no-tillage enthusiasts, and plant about half the crops, including part of the hay seeding and some 15 acres of of soybeans, by the no-till method.

"One of the best things we've ever done," is Dave Roth's assessment of the "tombstone" heifer feeding setup installed in 1975 for raising young stock.

Nevin and Ann's son, George, will soon graduate from high school and plans to step into the dairy operation, assuring a fourth generation to carry on the Blain View Holstein tradition.

Ray McMillen's picture-pretty white-fenced farmstead at Loysville R1 nestled at the foot of a mountain ridge, was the third stop on the Perry tour.

Ray and his sons, John and Larry, maintain a herd of about 70 registered Holsteins on their Ray-Mc Farm. McMillens had the first Perry County herd to top both the 19,000 and 20,000 herd averages in milk production. Last year, they finished third in the county's DHIA listing with 19,411 of milk and 728 of fat. The present rolling herd average is over 20,000 with 765 of fat.

The legacy of the great Whirlhill Kingpin is again evident in this herd. All but a few pedigree outsiders in the milking string trace their lineage back to Ray-McPride Whirlhill.

"Whirlhill," from an Irvington Pride Admiral dam, was the first Kingpin daughter to be named Excellent-Gold Medal and scored 92-4E.

Much of the outstanding descendancy in the McMillen barn is from the crossing of this Kingpin line with the Elevation lines.

The McMillen operation encompasses about a thousand acres of valley and mountain ground on three farms. Dry cows and heifers up to yearling age are maintained on one farm, while bred heifers and those readily for service are housed at another

Seventeen bulls from the McMillen herd have gone into A.I. service and numerous pride breeders have selected young sires from this herd. One bull is in service in Holland, while another is in Germany, and additional matings for foreign stud facilities are presently under contract.

The accomplishments of "Whirlhill", and the production and type legacy she left behind in the McMillen comfort stalls, have brought visitors from around the world into this barn in quiet, rural area of Perry County The guest books include entries from Italy, Germany, Switzerland, South American and India.

Named a Master Farmer in 1972, Ray gives much of the credit for the farm's successes to his late wife, Helen G. McMillen, who died recently following a prolonged illness. He pays tribute to her for having spent much time at the barn, working side-by-side with him, to build the Ray-Mc Holstein operation.

In addition to John and Larry, partners in the dairy operation, Ray has another son dairying on his own farm near Landisburg, one daughter living nearby and five grandchildren already interested in cows and calves.

The final stop in the tour, was at Dumbelle Farms, operated by Shayne and Tom Dum III, Landisburg R1

This young couple, the thir generation on the farm, recently took over complete operation of the 50-head herd when Tom's father, Tom Dum, Jr., began working for the Holstein Association as a cattle classifier.

"I'd rather breed a cow appealing to the eye, and then feed her for production," says Tom, whose herd is well-known for producing cows of fine type.

"That means stressing importance on good udders, stature and correct legs," he adds. "We incorporate high P.D. (predicted difference) proof bulls when it suits."

This careful cultivation of typiness has paid off. Dumbelle's latest classification totaled up to a B A.A. of 106.3, with seven cows scored Excellent, 29 Very Goods and 14 Goods.

But production doesn't take a back seat, either. last year's DHIA results compared out to an impressive 19,129 pounds of milk and 693 of fat.

Individual records are as impressive as the cows that made them.

Full sisters by Elevation have records to 32,000 milk and six records over 1000 fat.

Ten head carry 18 records averaging over 1000 fat.

One tremendous bodied brood cow is Dumbelle Skyliner Peggy Lou, 3E-91. At fourteen, "Peggy Lou" carries lifetime credits to date of 265,689 milk and 9785 fat.

Since 1968, 30 bulls have left the Dumbelle herd to go into sire service. One of the best known is "Peggy-Lou's" son by Elevation, Dumbelle Elevation Liftoff, now in use at American Breeders Service.

Dum's house the herd in a comfort stall barn, which features a rather unusual manure handling system, installed in 1971.

Wastes are run out of the gutters and elevated up onto a stack, which settles into a cement block enclosure. The block and concrete holding area has a capacity of at least nine months storage. A three-percent slope drains liquid to one end where they partially envelope. The enclosure is emptied twice yearly, before corn ground plowdown and on alfalfa ground during the late fall.

Tom and Shayne have three daughters and the fourth Thomas Dum, already busy poking around the dairy barn, at 16 months of age, on his riding toys.

Tom is active in local, state and national Holstein activities, and both he and Shayne are enthusiastic workers in the Perry County dairy princess and milk promotional programs.

Reap between the lines.

Look how much more alfalfa you can save with an extra week of protection-from Furadan.

In its fourth week of regrowth, your alfalfa adds nearly 20% of its total tonnage. Or it can lose as much as 80% of total tonnage to insect attack.

Yet other insecticides, sprayed on stubble, don't protect your alfalfa through that crucial fourth week before cutting.

Only Furadan gives you an extra week of protection.
Systemic protection against potato leafhoppers, blotch leafminers, snout beetles (in New York), alfalfa weevils, grasshoppers, pea aphids and lygus bugs.

Take it from the top.
Get all the high quality hay your field can produce. Get the extra protection of a true systemic insecticide for alfalfa. Get liquid Furadan. It's easy to apply. (You can even tank mix it with fertilizer.) And when you put it down on stubble, you don't have to worry about wheel marks.

You can now apply Furadan 4 Flowable as often as twice per season. Check the label for application instructions. And find out what a difference our extra week makes. Ask your chemical supplier for Furadan. From FMC Corporation, Agricultural Chemical Group, 2000 Market Street, Philadelphia, PA 19103.

Program Costs

As soon as the dairy price support program came under attack as the first target of the Reagan economic recovery program, the air was white with reports from dairy groups pointing out that its cost was minimal to the government.

Rather than the $1.3 billion for the 1980-81 marketing year reported by the Commodity Credit Corporation as the net cost of the program (purchases minus sales), Washington was bombarded with information showing that the cost was much less. Figures all the way from $1 billion to $315 million were offered as the "real" net cost.

It's true that if you take credit for all the CCC dairy stocks used for everything from school lunch programs to welfare programs to overseas give aways plus the cost of casein imports and value the present CCC inventories at current prices, you can have a pretty low figure on the bottom line However, it seemed like no one in Washington was listening.

Just don't worry about the confusing amounts that you will hear about the "real" costs because it depends on who's pushing the pencil and what they're trying to prove. It's all good information and should be used but it may be "water over the dam" as far as Congress is concerned

The figures that may be of more interest to you (and to Congress) is what will be a drop in the support price cost you. You already know that a drop to 75 percent of parity will cost you 88 cents a hundred as it did on April 1. You can double that if the support goes to 70 percent making the drop $1.76 a hundred. After that, it doesn't matter much. If you get no support price, the best guess is you'll lose about $2 a hundred and won't have to worry about 65 percent of parity

Smart Money

While most of us were hoping you would get the April 1 adjustment before Congress acted to stop it, the smart money among buyers was betting there would be no increase.

At least that's the way it looks because butter, powder, cheese and the Minnesota-Wisconsin prices barely moved from February to March. Usually with a support price adjustment expected the commodity prices take a jump the month before, but not this time.

Butter prices stayed the same while powder and cheese prices dropped a fraction of a cent and the M-W gained only one penny. The manufacturing grade milk price was still 24 cents below the support price.

With a March M-W of $12.67 you'll have a Class II price in Order 2 for that month of $12.62 or six cents less than February. Your Class I price in March will be $14.89 which is three cents better than February, but won't make up for the six cent drop in Class II milk. In addition there will be a 20 cent deduction from the pool for the Louisville Plan, so don't look for a blend price much over $13 00 for the first month of your Spring flush.

This looks like a bad month for good news in milk marketing but it looks like things may get worse before they get better.

Farmers Union honors retiring county agent

FARRAGUT — More than 60 local farmers honored retiring county extension agent Paul Rothrock in the fifth annual Farm/City banquet held Wednesday night at the Farragut United Methodist Church.

Rothrock was honored for his outstanding accomplishments over many years to area farmers. The Farm/City banquet is an annual affair hosted by the Lycoming County Farmers Union.

The local organization president, Verus Shaner, presented Rothrock a handmade Pennsylvania slate wall clock as a gift

Guest speaker at the dinner meeting was Orville Carver, State Director of Pennsylvania Green Thumb.

Also attending Wednesday evening were Reverend Sam Reed of Avis, and Leonard Zemaitis, Director of the Pennsylvania Farmers Union.

The Farm/City banquet culminated several days of farmers union membership activities in the area.

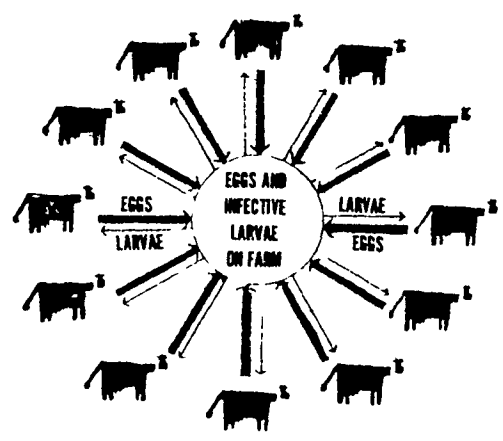
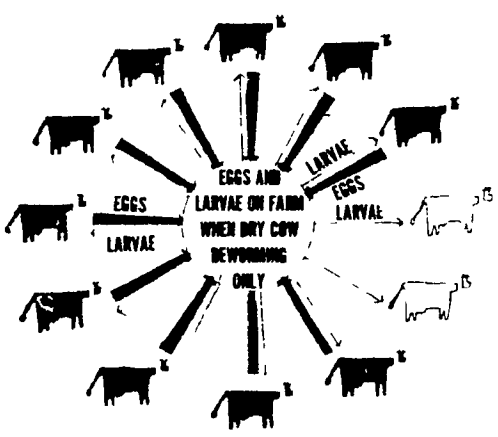
Anything other than BAYMIX® Crumbles is only a one-cow solution to a whole herd problem

THE LOGIC BEHIND WHOLE HERD DEWORMING

In an unwormed dairy herd, all animals deposit worm eggs on the farm and all animals are subject to further recontamination from infective larvae as herd parasitism continues unchecked





In a herd dewormed only at freshening, an average of 10 out of 12 animals have not been dewormed Because egg deposition has not been significantly reduced, and because of infective larvae already present on the farm, all animals are subject to heavy further recontamination

After whole herd deworming with Baymix, egg deposition is dramatically reduced, and as a result herd recontamination is also significantly reduced with herd productive efficiency maintained. In fact, a recent study shows a benefit of 4.8 lbs./milk/cow/day average when cows are dewormed as late as 200 days into lactation despite the fact they were dewormed at freshening.

Ag chemical group endorses OSHA option

CHARLESTON, S C — The National Agricultural Chemicals Association endorsed the development and non-mandatory use of good workplace practices for the pesticide industry as an alternative to government-imposed regulation

In testimony at federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration hearings held here, NACA argued that a basis has not been developed which justifies a broad-based standard for regulating pesticide exposures during manufacturing and formulating operations

"Most of the data that has been presented to OSHA in justification of a generic pesticide standard cited incidences which are either not representative of present-day work practices or are isolated cases not representative of the industry as a whole," said Richard M Bowers, Chairman of NACA's Occupational Safety and Health Committee

In endorsing the use of good workplace practices, Blowers offered NACA recommendations which stressed employee education in hazardous awareness, training in methods for protecting against hazards, emergency response procedures and medical surveillance programs.

He suggested that the principles of these good workplace practices could be disseminated to industry employers and employees through alternatives to mandatory regulation such as guidelines, technical training bulletins and hazard control or awareness seminars

NACA is a non-profit, Washington-based trade organization whose 115 members make or formulate virtually all the crop protection chemicals used in the Untied States and a large percentage used abroad.

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

If you ask the typical farmer why he owns so much machinery, he'll talk about the need for timeliness and the size of his operation and how efficient he has become because of his big machines.

But when it gets right down to it, I think many farmers have lots of machinery because they like machinery.

In fact, that might be the whole reason why they farm, and if they weren't farmers maybe they'd be road builders or they'd run trucking companies. They simply like machinery and they always have. What's wrong with that?

When they were little boys they preferred toy trucks and toy tractors to dolls and baseballs And as they grew older they found themselves riding on farm tractors pretending they were farming rather than practicing the piano or flying kites.

So now that they are grown up and when they've had a good crop year, instead of buying tax-sheltered securities they purchase new combines. No matter that the old ones are only four years old – they can justify new ones for business purposes

They can save some tax dollars, and besides that they like new combines.

Farmers haven't always been fascinated with machines. If you go back far enough in history you get to the time when the only farm implements were a few hand tools and crooked sticks that were pulled by oxen.

The first settlers in this country had little of what could be called machinery. They tilled their small farms, mostly with hand labor, and they tended their livestock and otherwise maintained themselves on the land.

The settlers who went west in the 1700s and early 1800s took very little in the way of farm implements with them. Records show that as late as the 1820s it took 50 to 60 man hours of labor to produce an acre of wheat

During that period farmers were using walking plows. They smoothed their ground with brush tied together to form a harrow. Seeding was done by hand and harvesting with a sickle. The only thresher was a hand flail.

It took the Civil War and the accompanying manpower shortage and improved agricultural prices to cause an agricultural revolution Farmers quickly grabbed on to the many inventions that were available to them.

That's when the horsepower era really got under way and farmers started buying grain drills, binders, hay balers, cultivators, even threshing machines.

Productivity took an enormous leap. By the turn of the century only eight to ten man hours of labor were needed to produce an acre of wheat. And a farmer of that period was using a gang plow, a seeder, a harrow, a binder, a thresher, a wagon – all horse-drawn.

Then all sorts of motor driven devices started popping up – steam powered traction engines, gasoline powered tractors, lightweight farm tractors.

But again it took a war, in this case World War I, to get farmers to switch over to the new methods of farming. Since then most farmers have been hooked by farm machinery and all the joys and benefits it can bring.

Not all farmers approached mechanized agriculture with the same enthusiasm.

I remember the contrast between two of our Missouri Ozarks neighbors – the McCafferty brothers across the road and Curt Williams, who lived a couple of miles down the road

Curt liked horses and mules and cared very little for machinery. You could tell by looking at his place. He had plenty of livestock and not much machinery. What he had was old and worn and it sat out in the barn lot rusting. Every spring he had to work for days just to get his plows to scour, his disks to turn, and his grain drill to function.

That was right before World War II when most farmers in that area were switching to tractors.

Then there were the McCafferty brothers–Lester and Okel. They loved machinery They knew how to take care of it and they knew how to use it and they farmed the biggest spread anywhere around – about 300 acres at a time when most other farmers had no more than 120.

They had the first combine in the neighborhood, the first pick-up hay baler, the biggest tractor, and they were always modifying and improving the machines they bought.

Needless to say, nothing sat outside to face the harsh winter weather They had sheds and barns for everything, and they spent their wintertime in a farm shop – the only one I had ever seen at that point with all of the tools and the equipment that you would expect in any automobile garage.

That's where they spent many hours, improving on the best of John Deere, McCormick Deering, Massey Harris, and all the rest.

There must still be some farmers who don't really like machinery and who see it as a necessary evil. They're the dairymen, the hog producers, the beefmen of this country.

Most crop farmers, on the other hand, tend to be machinery oriented. They like the feel of a new tractor, the look of a new combine, and the confidence of knowing that when they go to the field they have the equipment to get the job done.

While the American farmer's fascination with machinery has probably cost him in dollars and cents, it has also helped make him the most efficient agricultural producer in the world. So efficient, in fact, that his numbers have dwindled dramatically while his output has continued to increase.

The latest figures show one American farmer feeding 68 people – 20 of them in foreign countries. And while a Russian farmer produces 33,000 pounds of raw food products annually, an American farmer produces 375,000 pounds. That's an important difference – one that must be attributed in part to the American farmer's fascination with machinery.

State votes to continue six ag research projects

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Agricultural Research Committee has voted unanimously to fund six on-going agricultural research projects for another year, according to the State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell

Funding for the on-going projects, totaling $197,355, was approved on April 2 during a meeting of the nine-member committee, chaired by Hallowell

He said the money used to fund the projects is part of approximately $400,000 transferred to the department for research from the horse and harness racing revenues

'The goal of the research committee is to fund projects which will benefit our farmers, while making the best use of the taxpayers' dollar," Hallowell said

' Agricultural research becomes more important every year by helping develop better ways for farmers to meet rising costs and consumer demands for top quality products "

The Secretary noted that 42 new project proposals totaling over $1 million, ranging from the study of poultry diseases and their effects on egg production and shell quality to the effects of stray voltage in dairy operations, were also introduced at the meeting

These projects will be studied and reviewed over the next few weeks, Hallowell said A vote on which new projects will be funded is scheduled when the research committee meets on April 23.

The continuing projects approved for another year and the institutions doing the research are –Improved Vegetable Handling, to "develop better postharvest handling techniques for improved marketing of vegetables and strawberries, Penn State, $16,841.

--Vegetable Production Efficiency, develop new methods to increase vegetable production, Penn State, $42,000.

–Alcohol Production, study and evaluate on-farm ethanol fuel production from corn and other agricultural products, and engine modifications for its use, Penn State, $48.626.

--Swine Tuberculosis, an epidemiological and experimental study of the disease, University of Pennsylvania, $40,000.

–Flock Profiling, development of an automated test system to monitor antibodies in poultry, University of Pennsylvania, $28,688

–Diarrhea in Cows & Horses, develop rapid diagnosis of specific diarrheal diseases in dairy and beef cattle and horses, University of Pennsylvania, $21,200.

Members of the Pennsylvania Argicultural Research Committee include, besides Hallowell, Deputy Secretaries of Agriculture E Chester Heim and J. Luther Snyder, Fred Wertz, acting director of the Department's Office of Planning and Research, Charles R. Ord, executive secretary of the State Harness Racing Commission; Senator Edward Helfrick, chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee; Senator Patrick J Stapleton, minority chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, the chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee and Representative Kenneth Cole, minority chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee.

Eggmen provide real eggs for White House egg roll

WASHINGTON, D C — The American Egg Board will provide real eggs for the White House Easter Egg Roll that is traditionally scheduled for the day after Easter, this year on Monday, April 20

Fifty dozen eggs are being hard-cooked and decorated by residents of the Mancus Foundation for the Physically Handicapped at Wilmington, Del A committee from Mancus will select the most attractively decorated eggs for possible presentation to President Reagan and/or the First Lady

If the president's condition and schedule permit, an official presentation on behalf of the egg industry would be made by Herbert L Steinbrueck, AEB chairman; Louis B Raffel, AEB executive vice-president, and Valerie Heine, AEB northeast regional crrodinator Heine made the local arrangements for egg preparation and decorating with the Mancus Foundation, and for delivery of eggs from Baker Farms Inc , Middleton, Del.

Until AEB became involved in the White House Easter Egg Roll when the organization was formed, plastic imitation eggs had been used in recent years

AEB, on behalf of the industry, believed that real eggs attractively decorated were more in keeping with tradition, and an important symbol of the importance of real eggs in the diet

While the tradition holds to the basic, each Easter Egg Roll is slightly different from year-to-year This year is no exception.

While real eggs serve as the focal point, First Lady Nancy has added her touch by having wooden eggs autographed by Senators and Representatives These congressional collector items will be hidden on the South Lawn of the White House grounds to be found and kept by the children

A new Easter egg element this year is the AEB-sponsored National Egg Salad Week starting April 20 that encourages consumers to use all of those decorated ggs that survive the family egg hunt

Media have been sent photos and recipes by AEB

State and regional promotion specialists have worked in many local communities on publicity and obtaining appropriate proclamations to make official note of the promotional week.

Meat supplies should drop, followed by price rise

LANCASTER — In the second quarter, meat production will decline seasonally and is expected to total three to four percent below a year earlier

In the face of financial losses, hog producers are cutting production; the March 1 hog inventory was down eight percent from last year and the breeding inventory was down 11 percent This suggests substantial year-to-year declines in pork output for the rest of this year

In addition, because of reduced placements of cattle on feed last fall, fed cattle slaughter will drop sharply this spring Nonfed slaughter is also expected to decline in the spring as grazing begins

Broiler production is likely to continue above year-earlier levels, but smaller supplies of red meats will raise farm prices for poultry as well as for pork and beef

Retail meat prices are also forecast to rise this spring, substantially exceeding year-ago levels

In the first quarter, retail prices for red meats were around five percent higher than last year, while those for poultry were about 10 percent higher

During the first three months of 1981, total meat production was record large — about three percent greater than last year

Mild winter weather was conducive to above-average rates of gain for cattle and hogs, causing shorter-than-normal feeding periods and, in many cases, heavier-than-usual average weights Drought-reduced forage supplies and high production costs resulted in large nonfed slaughter, further boosting meat supplies

These large meat supplies helped hold down livestock and poultry prices in the first quarter

Primarily because of lower-than-expected farm prices in the first quarter, net farm income through the winter probably did not improve from last fall's low levels Even so, net income for all of 1981 will still substantially surpass the 1980 estimate of about $22 billion

Cash receipts for crops may be up six to 10 percent from 1980, and livestock receipts could rise nine to 13 percent

However, total production expenses are expected to climb nine to 13 percent this year, with fuel, feed, fertilizer, and agrichemicals leading the rise

Farmers' planting intentions reveal that the total acreage seeded to 1981 crops may surpass 1980 by about two percent

With average yields, 1981 crop production will be substantially larger than last year's drought-reduced levels

Supplies of seed, fertilizer, pesticides, and fuel are readily available, but at higher prices than last year

Retail food prices in 1981 are still forecast to increase 10 to 15 percent from last year; current indicators suggest a rise of nearly 12 percent.

The farm value of foods will account for nearly a third of the increase, while marketing costs will account for about half

Higher red meat and poultry prices will have the most significant impact, because these items account for nearly 35 percent of consumer food expenditures

Environmental indicators dip for soil, water, wildlife

LANCASTER — After a year in which the "quality of life" remained virtually unchanged in the United States, halting a 10-year decline, four environmental indicators resumed their downward trend in 1980, the National Wildlife Federation reported in its 12th annual Environmental Quality Index survey

Among the seven natural resources measured, water, wildlife, living space, and soil all suffered losses during the past year, the EQI study found.

The other three-minerals, air, and forests-remained unchanged

For the first time in five years, none of the indicators showed any improvement.

Thus, this year's report, covering 1980, was gloomier than that for 1979, a year in which four of the indicators - water, wildlife, soil, and forests - held their own, while one - air quality showed an improvemenet, and the remaining two - minerals and living space - declined

Air quality is the only environmental indicator that is higher today than when the first survey was made in 1970, the National Wildlife Federation noted

The EQI is an estimate of the quality of life in the U.S. based on a combination of objective measurements and the subjective judgments of the NWF staff in consultation with government experts and academic researchers Five federal agencies - the Bureau of Land Management, the Council on Environmental Quality, the Fish and Wildlife Service, the Forest Service, and the Soil Conservation Service - now cooperate with the Federation in the collection of resource data.

According to the 1981 EQI, last year conservationists anticipated the new decade with a "growing sense of trepidation."

A number of factors, including double-digit inflation, expensive energy supplies, urban decay, and soaring unemployment, caused the growth of popular sentiment against "overregulation," including some environmental rules and restrictions. Conservationists worried that many of their hard-won gains of the past ten years might be rolled back overnight.

"There were positive developments on a number of fronts in 1980," the EQI report notes. "But the thunderclouds are still building. The nation's current political climate may well signal even more stormy weather for environmental programs in the months and years ahead"

Summaries of the 1981 EQI reports on the seven resources follow

WILDLIFE

Down. While 1979 was U S widlife's best year in a decade, last year the long downward slide resumed The main reason habitat loss.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency reported that up to two million acres of habitat will disappear annually between now and the year 2000 The implications for wildlife are staggering

We're already down to nearly half of the 200,000 square miles of wetlands that once existed in the Lower 48, and we've lost 20 million of the 25 million acres of hardwood bottomlands along the lower Mississippi River.

In some parts of the country last year man-made and natural disasters caused a decline in wildlife populations Water tables in the Dakotas, western Minnesota and southern Canada were so low that waterfowl had a poor nesting year

And in the Pacific Northwest, the eruption of Washington's Mt St. Helens killed about 1 5 million wild animals

The country's worsening economic situation didn't help wildlife last year

Congress appropriated little cash for new refugees-the U S Fish and Wildlife Service's special fund for acquiring wetlands was slashed from a proposed $31 million to $18 5 million

On the bright side, Congress passed and the president signed a bill authorizing up to $5 million annually to help states pay for nongame and other wildlife conservation plans

MINERALS

No Change. As it has every year since the 1973 Arab embargo, oil dominated the minerals scene in 1980.

With only six percent of the world's population, the U S. continued to gobble up fully a third of all oil consumed last year-around 40 percent of it imported from other countries, which are steadily depleting their own resources

One encouraging sign is that more and more Americans began making energy conservation an important part of their daily lives. Here and there, entire communities waged war on waste last year, possibly heralding the advent of a nationwide conservation crusade.

But last year's passage by Congress of a costly ($20 billion for the first five years) "synthetic fuels" program worries some conservationists who point out that extraction of a relatively small amount of oil and gas from shale, sand, and coal, could cause massive environmental degradation.

AIR

No Change. Air quality continued to improve in many parts of the country last year, but pollution in some rural areas worsened as a result of a rapidly increasing phenomenon. acid rainfall.

Meanwhile, to head off mounting pressure to soften air-pollution regulations, EPA rolled back several deadlines, giving the slumping U.S auto industry more time to meet exhaust standards and granting Ohio's utilities more time to burn local supplies of high sulfur coal without installing costly scrubbers

These decisions were made despite evidence that acid rain-which occurs when coal or auto pollution combines in the air with water-has increased fiftyfold in the last 25 years over the eastern half of the country.

WATER

Down. Over much of the country, polluters have stopped dumping wastes directly into rivers and lakes and as a result many U.S. waterways have become swimmable and fishable again.

But now there's an appalling new threat unable to dump their toxic wastes into rivers and lakes, many industrial polluters have illegally buried or store them on land This has increased the flow of dangerous chemicals into the earth, and pollution of the ground water people use in their homes is increasing

Last fall, a House subcommittee released a list of 2100 places around the nation where industrial wastes may be contaminating the water. Even ocean water is not safe these days.

Right now poisoned dredge soils are regularly dumped in 130 places off the coasts of 15 states.

In some parts of the U.S ground water depletion, rather than pollution, is the main problem Thirty years ago, Americans were using about 20 billion gallons per day from underground supplies. By last year, the amount had increased to nearly 90 billion gallons.

FORESTS

No Change. For the fourth consecutive year, the EQ trend for forests remains level, but the situation is far from stable.

A world timber shortages grow, there's mounting pressure to cut more wood. And although a depressed U.S. construction industry is keeping domestic demand low for now, consumption is expected to leap from 13.3 billion cubic feet in 1976 to 20.3 billion in 1990 and 28.3 billion in 2030

There were some heartening developments in 1980. The federal government proposed to reserve about 15.4 million acres of national forest as wilderness, with possible future additions of as much as another 10.6 million acres. And the government also pledged its support for less dependence on national forests for commercial timber, more incentives to increase production on private timberlands.

LIVING SPACE

Down. Conservationists became alarmed last year over a new grass-roots movement out West, called the Sagebrush Rebellion. This revolt against land-use controls on about 400 million acres of public western lands is more than a regional conflict. In some ways it's a symptom of nationwide discontent with government regulations.

What the rebellion boils down to is an attempt by special-interest groups in Nevada, Arizona, and elsewhere to transfer federal lands to state ownership. But conservationists point out that while federal management of our public lands is far from perfect, states would find the cost of properly managing the land unbearable.

As if the "rebellion" weren't enough, U.S. living space declined further in both quality and quantity last year.

The National Park Service reports that already overburdened parks are deteriorating because of overcrowding and pollution Meanwhile, wasteful water projects continue to destroy pristine areas.

How to make plowing safe

MOUNT PLEASANT, Del. — An ancient Chinese philosopher wrote, "A 10,000 mile journey starts with the first step." The first step in spring planting activities is a safety readiness check.

Not many people think of plowing as dangerous, but improperly adjusted machinery, fatigue, or just plain carelessness can cause accidents.

Delaware extension safety specialist Ron Jester Says a thorough understanding of how to operate the equipment is fundamental. Proper maintenance and adjustment of tractor and plow are also vitally important.

Getting off to a safe start involves hitching properly. Poor positioning of the plow makes hitching difficult and could lead to injuries.

The plow should be on a firm, flat surface free of other objects. Securely block mounted plows before lowering the hydraulic lift.

A little forethought when unhitching can save hands, back, feet, tempers, and a lot of time when rehitching, adds the safety specialist.

Taking shortcuts is often asking for trouble For instance, don't try to put hitch pins in place from the operator's seat with the tractor in gear, advises Jester. Set brakes or put the transmission in park before getting off the tractor.

Also, be sure you have enough headroom when backing up inside buildings.

Jester says hitching is easier with the help of an assistant, adding that the trained tractor operator should know where the other person is at all times

An assistant should step in only to make the final pin connection when the tractor is inching forward, or is braked in the final position.

There have been many serious accidents during this simple operation, so extra care is essential.

Pins used to connect plow to tractor should be of proper size and secured with a clip of safety pin.

Check the owner's manual for details on setting up the plow properly. A safe plowing operation involves proper hitching, which produces good steering control and adequate penetration.

If adjustments are not correct (e.g. improperly set cutters), problems develop which lead to anger and frustration — ideal emotions for an accident, says Jester.

The size, shape, and slope of field affect the pattern of operations. Avoid dangerous working situations such as operating on steep slopes, getting too close to obstructions and ditch banks, and extremely tight turns where the tractor tire may catch the implement.

With the recent rain, farmers face a higher probability of getting stuck in wet fields, creating additional hazards if safety precautions are not followed.

If a farmer is struck and can't back out, it's best to get help, advises Jester. Don't chain blocks to the drive wheels because the chassis can revolve around the axle if wheels stick.

When pulling a tractor out of mut, hitch only to the draw bar. Engage the clutch smoothly, not suddenly.

Jester stresses that under no circumstances should extra riders be allowed on a tractor. This cardinal safety rule applies not only to plowing, but to all farm operations.

SOIL

Down. Last year, the U.S. exported more than $40 billion worth of food, and as the world's population continues its rapid climb, foreign demands on U.S. agriculture could reach staggering proportions.

Unfortunately, the U.S. is losing valuable farmland at an alarming rate Each year, about a million acres of prime farmland are permanently lost to urban sprawl, highways, and other development.

To offset these losses, about 1.3 million acres of new cropland are brought into production annually by draining swamps, irrigating deserts, and clearing woodlands-land being converted to agriculture at the expense of forests and other valuable wildlife habitat. And these new lands are subject to more serious erosion losses than prime acreage.

Currently, the U.S. Soil Conservation Service estimates that about four billion tons of American topsoil are lost annually to erosion.

Continuous cropping helps disease build in soybeans

GEORGETOWN, Del. — When no-till soybeans are grown continuously on the same soil, there's a good chance yields may suffer.

Robert Carroll, a plant pathologist at the University of Delaware's Agricultural Experiment Station, has been studying the relationship between tillage practices and root and stem diseases of soybeans.

Results from the past three years suggest that when they're grown repeatedly on the same ground, no-till soybeans have a higher incidence of Fusarium blight disease than do conventionally grown soybeans.

Fusarium blight is caused by a soil-borne fungus which can seriously reduce yields.

In heavily infested fields, losses may run as high as 20 to 25 percent, says Carroll. More often they run around five to ten percent. The disease easily represents a loss of two or three bushels an acre.

The scientist has been studying the incidence of disease in two major soybean varieties--Essex and Williams--grown under both no-till and conventional tillage after both wheat and barley. These are the two major cover crops used with no-till beans in this area.

He plans to collect data from test plots at the university's Georgetown Sub-station again this summer. He will then pass along his findings to Delaware's extension plant pathologist who will make any needed recommendations to growers.

Carroll says the jury's still out, but data he's collected so far show a trend towards a statistically significant higher level of Fusarium blight fungus on the roots and stems of plants grown in no-till, as compared to those grown under conventional tillage.

He's also isolated the fungus more often in soybeans grown after a cover crop of wheat, rather than barley. Seedcoats of no-tilled soybeans from his test plots also showed higher levels of the pathogen.

Carroll considers Fusarium blight to be the main threat to soybeans in the mid-Atlantic region right now.

"Other diseases like pod and stem blight or brown stem rot are present, but they haven't yet caused any serious losses like those we've confirmed from Fusarium blight," he says.

"I'm not condeming no-till," stresses the scientist. "It has many advantages. But you need to look closely at all aspects of any new practice.

"Depending on what we find out, it may mean that farmers growing no-till soybeans will have to think more carefully about the varieties they grow since use of resistant varieties is the best means of controlling a pathogen like Fusarium," he said.

Too old to breed?

A reader asks:

What is the maximum age for first breeding of various farm animals — horses, ponies, goats, etc.? If a pony is first bred at 14 years, could she be expected to have a normal delivery and offspring?

Dr. Sheaffer comments:

Bear in mind that within each species of farm animals there is a fairly wide range of aging. For example, one pony at 14 may be experiencing various degenerative geriatric diseases while another 14 year old pony may be in perfect health and in her prime.

The general health of an animal is more critical than its reproductive ability But both of these criteria are inseparably linked to one another If a 14 year old pony is in good physical health, she may also be in good reproductive health

In general, I would say that 14 years is too old to begin breeding any member of the equine species However, there certainly may be exceptions to this rule

Have your veterinarian perform a thorough physical exam and a reproductive exam before you breed the pony the first time A complete blood count, internal palpation, a cervical or uterine culture and a visual speculum exam of the cervix and vagina will help you determine if she is a good candidate for breeding

In general, a mare should be first bred before age 12 A doe, ewe or heifer should be bred by 3 years of age

Conception in the older female farm animal is usually a greater problem than is gestation or delivery. If a healthy 14 year old pony conceives, she is likely to deliver a live, normal foal

Temperature change

A reader asks:

What would make a horse's temperature drop to 96 degrees Fahrenheit? Recently one of our geldings went off feed and when I took his temperature the thermometer read 96 degrees.

Can a thermometer freeze? I keep it out in the barn.

Dr. Sheaffer comments:

A temperature of 96 degrees Fahrenheit in a horse is considered a mild hypothermia. The normal body temperature ranges between 99-101 degrees Fahrenheit. Causes of such abnormal temperature include the following. chilling from the environment, ingestion of certain poisons and toxins; viral diseases (occasionally); treatment with antipyretic drugs like asprin and dipyrone; bacterial infection which releases a toxin into the system; and hypoglycemia or hypocalcemia.

A thermometer is a sealed hollow glass chamber containing mercury. Temperature extremes in a barn can cause the mercury to expand and contract beyond the strength of the glass. This causes the glass to crack into the mercury chamber, breaking the seal.

These cracks are difficult to detect with the naked eye. In most cases, a cracked thermometer will give you an incorrect temperature reading.

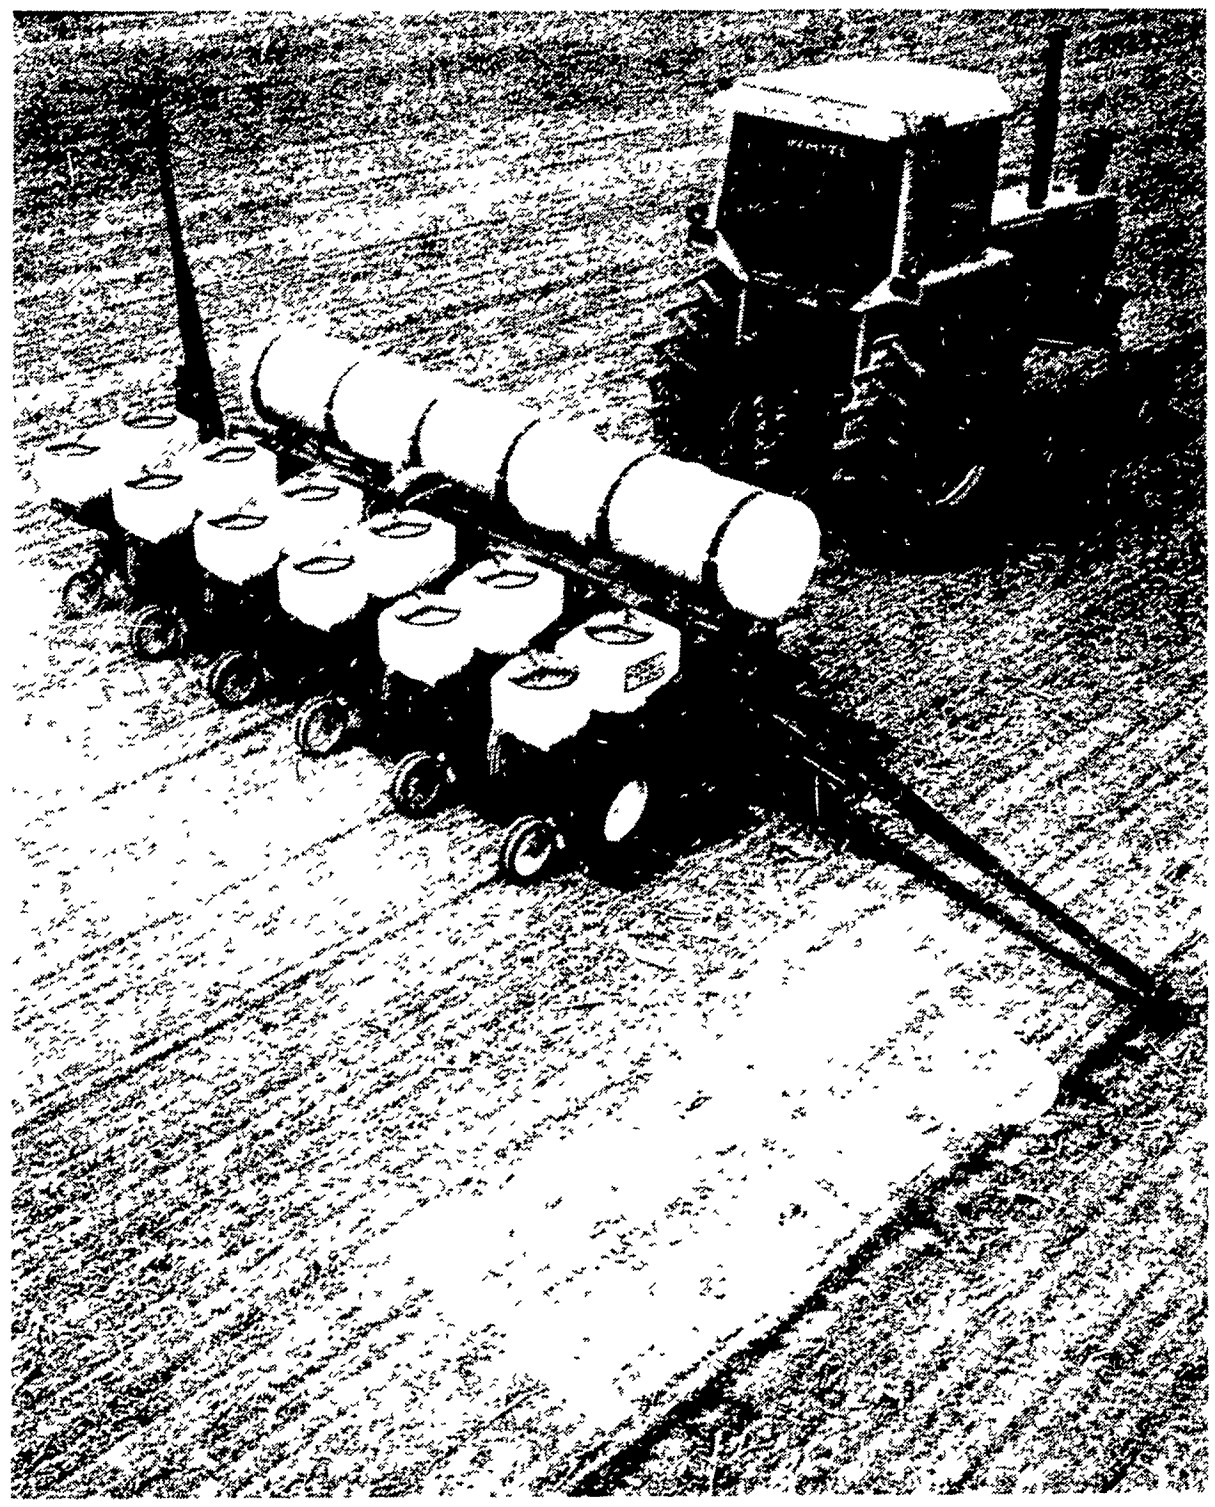
The White 5100 Seed Boss... A Breakthrough in Planting Accuracy



ACCURACY

The new White® 5100 Seed Boss™ Planter represents a breakthrough into a new era of accuracy. Accuracy that can payoff with increased germination, better stands and higher yields for you.

Exclusive new dual depth gauge wheels with walking-beam linkages allow both wheels to act with complementary action. So when one gauge wheel goes over a large clod or rock, the other remains in contact with the seedbed. As a result the height of the two wheels is averaged and the double-disc opener raises only half the height of the obstacle. Gauge wheels on competitive models act in tandem causing the seed disc opener to raise the full height of the obstacle. The White payoff . . . greater seed depth accuracy.

More gentle seed handling with a new pressurized metering system adds greater uniformity in seed spacing. A central blower provides constant air pressure to each metering unit. (Individual row blowers on 4-row models). Air then "holds" the seed in a cell on the seed disc until a gentle brush cut-off allows it to fall in a natural trajectory through the seed tube. The design of this system essentially eliminates forward motion of the seed, minimizing roll and bounce in the seed trench. The White payoff . . greater in-row accuracy with minimal seed coat damage.

New constant-pressure press wheels exert uniform down pressure on the sides of the trench to consistently firm moist soil around the seed despite changing soil or terrain. The White payoff . . . optimum germinating conditions.

A host of standard performance and convenience features are integrated into every 5100 Seed Boss. Features such as a 7x7-inch main frame, hydraulic markers, quick population change transmission and new 1½ bushel seed hoppers. And it's all ready for you in 8-row folding, 6- and 4-row models.

See Your White Dealer for Accuracy that pays off.

Working out the bugs from full-season no-till beans

GEORGETOWN, Del. — There's considerable interest among Delaware farmers in full-season no-till soybeans. But though the system shows promise, researchers and extension personnel at the University of Delaware say there are still plenty of bugs to be worked out yet. Until then, they're not advocating wide-scale adoption of this practice.

"We have worked out some of the problems, though," says extension crops specialist Frank Webb, " and I think some of our better farmers may want to try it out on a few acres."

Weed control is one of the biggest problems with full-season no-till soybeans because available residual herbicides aren't as effective as those available for no-till corn. For this reason, seedbed selection is very important. The thicker the mulch cover, says Webb, the better the system will work. As with no-till corn, the cover is needed to conserve soil moisture, reduce soil temperature, and control erosion. It's also critical for weed control.

If the soil surface is effectively covered with a mulch of some sort, weed seed germination is greatly reduced and you're less dependent on the effectiveness of herbicides, he says.

A good double crop residue from either barley or wheat followed by no-till soybeans seems to control weeds well.

Living covers from fall-established small grains or legumes have also proven very successful in some of his studies at the university's Georgetown Substation.

None of Webb's work with no-till full-season beans suggests that they require a special fertility program. But the phosphorus and potash will have to be broadcast on the soil surface.

As with conventional soybeans, liming should be done to maintain a profile pH in the neighborhood of 6.0 on light, sandy soils. In heavier silt loam soils the pH might go to 6.5, he says.

Surface pH isn't as critical under soybeans for herbicide activity as it is for corn.

Little work has been done on variety selection for no-till full-season beans. So far, the standard, better-performing varieties under conventional tillage seem to do best.

Though he hasn't noticed any additional insect problems under this system, he does say that late-season foliage and pod feeders are likely to be as much of a problem under no-tillage as they are under conventional cultivation. But again, little work has been done on this aspect of no-till full-season production.

Getting back to weed control, Webb has found that a combination of Paraquat plus 2, 4-D applied 10 days to two weeks before planting gives satisfactory results.

If a bit more burn-down activity is needed right after planting, a little more Paraquat can be applied along with residual materials like Lorox for broadleaf weed control, plus one of the grass killers like Dual, Lasso, or Surflan.

A more expensive but very effective practice involves spraying once, just after planting, with Roundup (at 1.5 to two quarts per acre) along with Lorox and one of the grass materials mentioned above.

Row spacing is another critical part of full-season no-tillage bean production, says Webb. His work at the Georgetown Substation indicates that rows wider than 20 inches aren't satisfactory for this system.

"We must have 20-inch row planting or narrower—the closer the better. If you have a no-till drill you can get your spacing down to six or seven inches," he says.

Close rows have the same yield advantage under no-till that they have under conventional tillage.

They also are a distinct advantage for weed control because the closer the rows, the quicker the canopy will shade the soil surface and the fewer weeds you'll have.

Effective weed control is critical to successful no-till soybean production, stresses Webb. Choose a branching type variety that will quickly make a good canopy, use close row spacing, and adjust your plant population accordingly. The narrower the row, the fewer beans per foot you need.

Combined with an effective chemical weed-control program, the results should be good, he says.

"Over the last few years our no-tillage beans have yielded as well as conventional soybeans in many instances, or a bit higher."

There are still problems to be worked out before Webb and other specialists at the University will feel confident in advising wholesale adoption of this cultural practice for soybeans. But he sees no reason why farmers who have the equipment and are good managers shouldn't experiment with the idea on a few acres.

Farm real estate values climb at slower rate

LITITZ — U.S. farmland values increased an average of 9.3 percent during the year ending February 1, 1981, well below the 15-percent increase of a year ago, and less than the 11-percent rise in the Consumer Price Index over the same period.

Since land prices increased more slowly than the CPI, the real value of farmland declined. The last such decline occurred in the year ending March 1, 1971.

The 1980 drop in the real value of farmland reflected a decrease in net farm income from $31 billion in 1979 to $23 billion in 1980. High interest rates and tight credit also affected the farm real estate market.

The largest increases in farmland values occurred in Mississippi, up 27 percent, and California, up 22 percent.

Alabama, Louisiana, and Washington each showed an increase of 18 percent. Only 11 of 48 states showed increases that matched or exceeded the rate of inflation.

Transfers of farm real estate number 9 percent fewer in 1980 than in 1979 Voluntary sales of farm real estate declined 14 percent. The rate of foreclosures increased from 1.1 per 1,000 farms to 1.3.

The farm real estate market is expected to pick up in 1981 as interest rates decline and net farm income rebounds. From February 1981 to February 1982, land values are expected to increase between 11 and 16 percent.

Ag Secretary Block addresses UDIA meeting

WASHINGTON, D.C — United States Secretary of Agriculture John R Block outlined portions of his proposed farm program, including a $2 million appropriation for dairy research, in his March 24 speech at the 11th annual meeting of United Dairy Industry Association.

The annual meetings of UDIA and its operating organizations, American Dairy Association, Dairy Research Inc. and National Dairy Council took place in Washington, D.C.

Block said, "We have sought to provide in the budget and in the farm program great emphasis on expanded agricultural exports, emphasis on research and extension. There's some $2 million of additional research for dairy in our budget, plus additional monies for several other agricultural endeavors."

About dairy price supports, Block stated, "I support, as you know, that this mandatory increase not go into effect and I think a great many of you support the fact that it should not go into effect.

"We're getting too many dairy products today Without foregoing this price increase, we can have some 11 billion pounds by the end of this year and about $1 8 billion worth of product on hand There isn't any way in the world that I can justify that "

Block explained the administration's policy on casein imports by saying, "Action to restrict casein imports legislatively is untimely, it's unwarranted, and it may well be a violation of our international trading codes.

"Our trading partners under the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs would almost certainly look unfavorably on such action If limiting casein imports proves necessary, Section 22 administrative action is the proper way to go."

In answer to a question from the floor on the Soviet grain embargo, Block said, "I've been an ardent opponent of the grain embargo since the day it was imposed.

"The timing on lifting it is going to depend on the international situation . The president has said that it will either be lifted or broadened."

On farmland loss, Block said, "I don't think the United States Department of Agriculture should take a heavy-handed role in land use activities, but I think we definitely have a responsiblity of taking a leadership role. The issue must have broad visibility, not just in terms of farmers appreciating it, but the public, so that you have the public support."

The approximately 700 delegates, guests and staff who attended the meeting also heard addresses by UDIA President Glenn H. Lake, Executive Vice President John W Sliter and guest speakers Roy W Uelner, executive vice president, Allis-Chalmers Corporation and Barbara Keating, president, Consumer Alert

Lake announced the results of the successful, UDIA-initiated fall 1980 cheese promotion

He said, "We are thrilled to report that UDIA not only reached its goal of a 10 percent increase in cheese sales as a result of our ffort in the 'Cheese ..Slice of Life' promotion — it beat it by 60 percent

According to date compiled by the Market Research Corporation of America, UDIA's $4.2 million promotion increased cheese sales nearly 16 percent during the 90-day period That's an additional 90 7 million pounds of cheese."

He also said, "During 1980, results of a 10-market study conducted for United Dairy Industry Association show that dairy farmers got back $2.20 for every $1 00 invested in non-brand milk advertising in 1979 That's a 120 percent net return on investment."

Sliter's remarks centered on the dairy industry as a major contributor to America's food supply.

He also analyzed the Commodity Credit Corporation's annual report for 1980 in which, he said, "you will find stated that net expenditures for surplus dairy products in 1980 was $314 million — not $1.3 billion "

To arrive at this figure, Sliter explained, "Take the value of the opening inventory and add to it· purchases during the year, cost of storage, cost of re-packaging and shipping Substract from it the value of the ending inventory, the value of products donated in foreign aid through PL-480 (that is a subsidy to our state Department, not a subsidy to farmers), subtract the value of products donated by the military (again, not a subsidy to farmers), subtract the value of products donated to schools and/or human welfare programs (again, a cost which should correctly be borne by all Americans, not just dairy farmers), and you have net cost of doing business of $314 million — not $1.3 billion.

"However, and a very important however, as we forecast production for the current marketing year and forecast commercial demand for dairy products, the cost of operations for CCC may be much different than what I've just reported CCC's gross expenditures in the 1980-81 marketing year may increase another $1 billion to $2.3 billion and net expenditures may be in excess of $1 3 billion.

"A forecast of that magnitude commands of us as an industry that we intensify our efforts to expand the commercial market for dairy products."

Uelner spoke on the future of U S agriculture and identified significant areas of change which will affect farming's relationship with society in general Some of these are a policy of low-cost food, Third World growth, the energy situation, rural population growth, land and water use, increasing farm productivity from harvest and storage efficiencies and computer-assisted automation

Keating, in her talk, criticized Nader-type consumer activitists and discouraging economic competition, reducing consumer choice, contributing to inflation, resurrecting a suspicion of science and playing on "a fear of the fictitious epidemic, that of death and dying "

She said; "Consumers footed the bill or regulation at $102.7 billion during 1980. Regulatory agencies have come to act the role of executive, legislative and judiciary with agency rules carrying the impact of law, formed, passed and executed, complete with penalties for the disobedient "

The organization which she heads, Consumer Alert, works to represent and educate the public on consumer and environmental issues.

The 137-member House of Delegates, governing body for UDIA, ADA, DRINC and NDC, elected new Boards of Directors Seven regional caucuses elected UDIA's 25-person Board, which contains five new members for 1981. The UDIA Board also directs ADA and DRINC. National Dairy Council's 38-person Board has ten new members. Following the March 25 general session, the newly-elected Boards selected officers The president sof UDIA, ADA and DRINC and the chairman of NDC were re-elected for one-year terms

UDIA and its three operating arms conduct a national promotion program to increase consumption of U S milk and dairy products The program is funded by dairy farmers, processors/handlers and equipment/supply manufacturers through member organizations and affiliated Dairy Council units It includes advertising, marketing, nutrition research and education, product and process research and development, market research and public relations

Combining talents

Combining crews in the Midwest conjure up images of bygone days when other 'cowboys' ate prairie dust and earned their calluses driving north from Texas to Missouri.

Of course in the early days of the Midwest, the drives were done with horses and the harvest was Longhorn cattle heading for the stockyards. Now the drives are made sitting on combines and the harvest is acre upon acre of grain. About the only things that have remained constant are the heat, dust, and long days of sitting.

Combine crews are the drifters of modern day, following the grain harvest north into Canada, working night and day to reap the bounty before Mother Nature proves fickle and destroys her own creation with too much or too little rain or a similar catastrophy.

Sound romantic, inviting, ready to hop on board? To most of us, the idea of joining a combine crew would be about as inviting as . . . having a tooth pulled without novacaine. But there are some brave souls remaining who think this type of career is for them.

One of these individuals is Mitchell Fernsler of Lebanon. He writes

I am interested in any information you might send me on working for a combining crew in the grain belt. I am planning to move to the Midwest and hope to find a job in this line of work.

For some insight into this type of employment, you don't have to leave your home county, Mitchell.

As a matter of fact, if you contact one of the 'help wanted' advertisers in Lancaster Farming, you'll find a wheat-and-fall-harvest-from-Texas-to-Montanna employer is based almost in your back yard — Newmanstown.

David Barry, R1 Newmanstown, 717/949-2363, is one individual who hires people for his combine crew.

I spoke to David's mother last Tuesday since David was in the southern states on business. She explained that David was a 'pardner' in a crew last summer and now owns his own traveling combining business. He'll be pulling out of Newmanstown on May 10 with a caravan of combines.

She explained crew members live in a house trailer while on the road, it's steady work, and employees receive a bonus at year's end if the harvest quota is reached The only stipulations are each employee must be 18 years old or over and able to drive a grain truck or tractor. Single people are preferred.

She recommended you contact her son either at 7 a.m. or p.m. since he's out the rest of the day readying the combines for the long haul ahead.

Happy trails, and be sure to stock up on ice water, suntan lotion, and a 10-gallon hat.

Cut firewood now for next winter

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Balmy April weather is a good time to cut and stack your firewood for keeping cozy on cold, blustery days next winter.

This would also be a good time to buy fresh-cut firewood for burning next winter — if you can find it — says John F. Kundt, Extension forestry specialist and associate professor of horticulture at the University of Maryland

Kundt notes greenwood from all species of trees should be dried for seven to nine months in order to burn well in stoves and fireplaces The advantage of dry wood is more heat — not necessarily less creosote in your chimney flue

He explained wood which is either green or wet often uses one-third or more of its potential heat energy to drive out moisture when burning.

You can aid the drying process by cutting logs into ready-to-use lengths and splitting all pieces which are more than five inches in diameter

Stack your wood loosely in long tiers not more than five feet high Keep the lower layer off the ground by laying it on lengths of pipe, railroad ties or scrap lumber.

You could also dump your firewood in a loose, rounded heap. But, again keep it from direct contact with the ground. Stacking firewood in an old livestock or tobacco barn or toolshed is also acceptable, provided there is good ventilation.

However, do not store firewood in or near your house, or in a building attached to your house, Kundt cautioned. This precaution is necessary in case the wood is harboring insects which could cause damage or become a nuisance in your home.

If possible, locate your outdoor tiers or piles of firewood in a sunny location, exposed to breezes. Cover their tops with a plastic film or other waterproof material.

Blackbird damage to corn less than farmers assume

WILLIAMSPORT — Blackbird damge to Pennsylvania corn fields averages less than 1 bushel per acre for over 86 percent of crops examined in a recent study, according to wildlife scientists at Penn State University.

James Wakeley and Robert Mitchell of Penn State's College of Agriculture examined 288 randomly selected cornfields in the Commonwealth. They found that blackbird damage generally is not as severe as farmers may assume.

Statewide, 62 percent of the sampled fields contained some damaged ears. Wakeley and Mitchell extimated the total loss to be about 630,000 bushels, worth over $1.4 million.

"Certain farms, at the same time, can sustain severe losses," Wakeley stated. "Five of the farms we sampled lost more than five bushels per acre, and one farm lost an estimeated 17.6 bushels per acre to blackbirds."

When asked on a questionnaire to estimate their dollar losses from blackbirds, 479 growers in an earlier study said damages averaged $482 per farm In this study, damage was estimated to affect some 11,910 Pennsylvania farms. Thus, total damage from blackbirds would be over $5.7 million

"The latter figure is more than four times the estimated dollar loss based on field sampling," Wakeley commented. "It indicates that growers tend to overestimate the magnitude of the bird-damage problem."

In 1979, the average corn yield in Pennsylvania was 95 bushels per acre for a total production of 115,425,000 bushels, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service. Bird-caused losses of grain amounted to less than 1 percent of the final reported yield.

Similar studies in Kentucky and Tennessee – and Ontario, Canada -- found that bird damage to corn averaged less than 1 percent of the yield

On most farms, normal harvesting losses greatly exceed bird-caused damage. Some studies have shown that mechanical pickers and corn combines lose three to eight bushels per acre.

The Penn State study will be published in the Spring of "Science in Agriculture," the quarterly magazine of the Agricultural Experiment Station at University Park.

While methods to control blackbirds are available, Wakeley and Mitchell said relatively few corn growers in Pennsylvania would benefit from using them. Nonetheless, they describe one control device as an acetylene or propane-powered exploder used to frighten blackbirds. The other technique is a repellent known as Avitrol Corn Chops-99.

When the study was made, the cost of exploders ranged from about $175 to $625, depending upon the model and optional features desired.

A single exploder may be effective over a 10-acre area. The cost of fuel was about $15 to $30 per season.

"If used over a number of years, growers with as little as $5 to $6 per acre damage, about 2.5 bushels per acre, might benefit," Dr. Wakeley noted. "About five percent of Pennsylvania corn growers, on some 1400 farms, are in this category."

As for the repellent, a single application by helicopter cost $7.25 per acre at the time of the study According to the label, as many as three to four applications may be needed during the growing season if damage is severe.

Even if Avitrol were completely effective, few corn growers in Pennsylvania could justify its use, Wakeley observed.

The project is supported by U.S Fish and Wildlife Service funds and by Fair Funds administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Angus heifer sets Canadian sales record

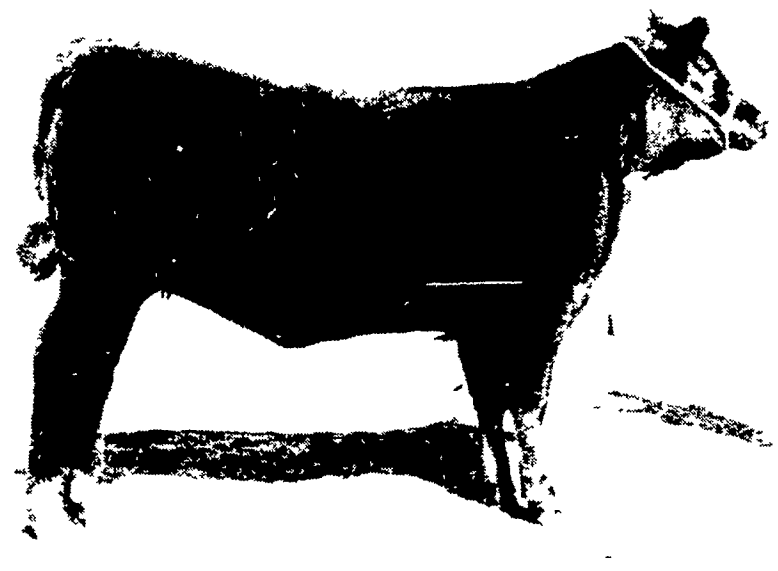
LACOMBE, Alberta — Stivers Angus of Pittstown, New Jersey and Moltzahn Angus of Bashaw, Alberta, Canada, announce Canadian record for the sale of an Angus female.

Here the 21st Annual Cross Country Sale, Stivers Angus bought Classy Lass MG 9'80, February heifer, from the William Moltzahn family for $50,000. It was the highest price ever paid in Canada for an Angus female.

Classy Lass was included at the last minute on sale day, by popular demand, as a special added lot. Her sire, Sir Wms Wampum, had been sold only moments earlier at the same sale for $150,000, another Canadian record.

Her dam, Elleemere Lass MG 99'77, had set the previous Canadian record female price last fall when Stivers Angus purchased her for $30,000 during the Moltzahn Angus 1980 Production Sale.

Both outstanding females may be seen on Saturday, July 25, at the New Jersey Angus Association Field Day to be held at Stivers Angus in Pittstown.



Classy Lass MG 9'80, a February heifer, brought $50,000 to set a Canadian sales record recently.

USDA eliminates payments on 1980 corn, sorghum

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture will make no deficiency payments on the 1980 crops of corn and sorghum, according to Edward Hews, acting administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service

Under current legislation, deficiency payments are made to producers when the average market price received by farmers during the first five months of the marketing year (October through February) is less than the established "target" price.

The national weighted average price received by farmers during the October 1980 through February 1981 period was $3.11 per bushel for corn and $3.04 per bushel for sorghum.

Since these prices are above the 1980 target price of $2.35 per bushel for corn and $2.50 per bushel for sorghum, no deficiency payments are required, Hews said.

Dairymen complete Purina school

CARLISLE — For the purpose of studying successful dairy feeding and management practices, Ed Knisely, of Knisely's Agricultural Center, Inc., Carlisle, held a "Step By Step" Dairy School for dairymen in Cumberland County.

The school consisted of a series of evening sessions which covered calf and heifer management, dry cow management, improving milk production and dairy health.

"The purpose of this school is to take a small group of dairymen and help them further develop sound management, good feeding, careful sanitation and breeding programs, which will ultimately bring greater profits to their dairy operation", says Knisely.

"We also plan to schedule more Step By Step Schools on a continuous basis throughout the year."

Similar schools are held throughout the country by Purina Dealers with the aid of Ralston Purina Representatives and local veterinarians. Knisely explained further that there is no obligation to attend a Step By Step School.

"Progressive dairymen are always interested in increasing the profitability of their operations and we feel we help them reach their goals by holding these training sessions," he said.

Ralson Purina Representatives Gene Hubbard and Greg Muchmore, along with Dr. Dave Griswold, DVM were instructors involved with this Step By Step School which lasted six weeks.

The graduation ceremony was held in Carlisle. Featured at the graduation were Greg Muchmore, Gerald Jones, Stanley Reinford, Dr. Dave Griswold, Ed Knisely, Steve Brymesser, Charles Kosher and Delmar Cornman.

Also involved were Gary Miller, who also graduated from the school, and Purina District Manager Gene Hubbard.

Pigs need Vitamin B

SMYRNA, Del — Slow growth rate, premature or stillborne litters, anemia and diarrhea are just a few of the problems associated with B vitamin deficiencies in swine.

The B-complex vitamins include riboflavin or B2, pantothenic acid, niacin, vitamin B12 and choline

Deficiency symptoms in swine are similar for many of these vitamins, so on the farm it's often hard to know just what the problem is, says University of Delaware extension livestock specialist Richard Fowler.

Riboflavin or B2 must be added in a crystalline form to the feed because most cereal grains contain very low levels of this vitamin. The enzyme systems of the body rely on it. When it's deficient, poor growth, poor feed intake, skin lesions and stiffness may occur.

Sows exhibit little or no sign of heat and have a poor conception rate if they do cycle. Pigs born from B2 deficient sows may be premature, dead or weak.

Recommended levels of this vitamin are 1.5, 1.2 and 2 milligrams (mg) per pound of ration, respectively, for the starter diet, grower-finisher diet and breeding herd ration.

Deficiency symptoms of pantothenic acid include a high-stepping or wobbly walk called goosestepping. Lower fertility, poor growth, and diarrhea are other signs of low intake.

The breeding herd and starting pigs should have eight mg of pantothenic acid per pound of diet. The growing-finishing pig needs six mg per pound of feed.

Niacin is a B vitamin related to one of the protein building blocks, the amino acid tryptophan. Niacin is plentiful in corn but unavailable to the pig because it occurs there in a form he can't metabolize. Symptoms of deficiency include hair loss, skin inflammation, vomiting, diarrhea, and slow growth

Good natural sources include alfalfa meal and pasture. Breeding stock and pigs up to 60 pounds should have 10 mg per pound of diet Growing-finishing swine require eight mg per pound of diet

Animal products are rich sources of vitamin B12 but plant products are poor sources. Anemia and slow growth result when this vitamin is left out of the diet. The requirement is very low and is stated in micrograms. (A microgram is one-one thousandth of a gram)

Since there are 454 grams in one pound, we're dealing with a very small but essential amount. Breeding animals and young pigs require 10 micrograms (mcg) of B12 per pound of ration.

Growing-finishing pigs need six mcg per pound

The last B vitamin is choline

Recent research shows that this ingredient is more important than once believed. In the past the choline contest of natural feeds was considered adequate for pigs. Choline deficiency has been suggested as the cause for spraddle legs in pigs, but this has not been proven. The trait appears to be due more to heredity than nutrition

One pound of breeding ration should contain 250 mg of choline; starter diets, 86 mg, and finisher feeds, 50 mg per pound of complete feed.

If you want to check the B vitamin content of your premix and ration program, compare the tag and final feed with the requirements. For example, suppose your premix feed for getting pigs to 60 pounds contains 6,500 mg per pound of niacin.

Seven pounds of this premix are used to make one ton of feed

There are 45,000 mg of niacin per ton of finished feed. One pound of feed contains 22.75 mg (45,000. divided by 2,000). The recommendations call for 10 mg per pound of diet. So the feed contains sufficient niacin.

Ideally, 'premixes should be packaged with the vitamin and mineral components separated Certain minerals such as iron can reduce the potency of some vitamins.

It's time to control thistle

WESTMINSTER, Md. — If you're going to bring perennial and biennial thistles under control, the time to start is now—during the period from mid-April to late May.

So says Ronald L. Ritter, Extension weed control specialist and assistant professor of agronomy at the University of Maryland in College Park.

Canada thistle and the musk or nodding thistle are the culprits which Ritter has in mind. He lists three methods which can be used for their control. The procedures are:

—Mowing at least four times per year;

—Continuous cultivation, including plowing and disking,

--Periodic chemical applications.

Ritter commented that frequent mowing will prevent seed-set, rather than killing the thistles directly. Thus, it is primarily effective for controlling biennials like the musk thistle, which spreads only by seed.

To work well against the Canada thistle, mowing should be combined with herbicide application. Even then, the procedure is apt to require at least two years.

Growing a perennial forage crop--particularly alfalfa--on thistle-infested land also fits well with the mowing procedure. Luckily, alfalfa withstands frequent mowing better than thistles can. If the thistle infestation is heavy, try a year of "bare ground" control before seeding alfalfa.

Continuous cultivation for thistle control depends upon starting at the critical early bud stage, about four to six weeks after emergence of the first plants in the spring. This is the period when food reserves in the roots are at their lowest point of the year.

Up to 90 percent of a Canada thistle infestation can be eliminated in one season by beginning thorough cultivation at the critical beginning point in the spring and repeating the process every 21 days throughout the growing season.

For chemical control of thistles and other broadleaf plants, Ritter recommends 2,4-D, dicamba (Banvel), amino triazole (Amitrol T), or picloram (Tordon). Listed in progressive order of potency, from low to high, these herbicides do not control grasses which might be present in the same area.

To combat both thistles and grasses, the Maryland Extension specialist recommends glyphosate (Roundup)

Homeowners and most farmers should stick with 2,4-D or Banvel, Ritter advises, since they are cheaper and less dangerous to handle than the other herbicides mentioned. In any case, be sure to follow the label directions carefully.

Spring and fall application of a recommended herbicide should take care of the musk or nodding thistle in one growing season, Ritter commented. But getting rid of the Canada thistle may take two years of twice-a-year chemical treatments.

The best time to apply herbicides is before the thistle flower stalk forms. Late April to early May is appropriate for the first application in most of Maryland. In the mountain areas of western Maryland, the season is usually delayed two to three weeks.

Odds even for Greenwood vo-ag program

BY SHEILA MILLER

MILLERSTOWN — The odds of Greenwood School District (Perry County) getting their vocational agriculture program back in the classroom are 50-50, according to School Superintendent Richard Wolferd.

Although he is hopeful the program will be reinstated in the curriculum next fall, Wolferd pointed out a lot depends on the availability of funds and what grants and state reimbursement the school receives. A final decision by the school board is expected between the monthly meetings in May and June.

The superintendent pointed out interest in the vocational agriculture program has been great because the school district is in a rural area. He noted 30 students have "expressed a genuine interest" in the vo-ag curriculum for the next school year.

And he stated a newly organized farmers' group, called Greenwood Farmers, has expressed interest in the program.

Getting the vo-ag program back into the Greenwood School District has become an important issue with the farmers of the area, especially since its setback last year.

According to an informed source, the school district had made plans to start up the vocational agriculture program last Spring. But, with the increased tax load brought on by the construction of a new elementary school, the school board started whittling the budget. One of the programs to be scrapped was the vo-ag program.

Wolferd admitted, "Last year we couldn't swing the vo-ag program financially." The needed funds fell short, despite the federal funds that had been approved for the school's program.

The school district had applied to the state's Department of Education for financial aid. According to a Department spokesperson, the monies had been approved for the vo-ag program but were turned back because of the local money involved.

"It's a touchy situation," said the spokesperson. "The school district is trying to pursue an opportunity for its students which the local taxes won't alway permit."

The school district's financial aid applications submitted this year are currently pending review by the Department of Education. Qualified applications will be listed from all 504 school districts, statewide, and projects will be funded in order until the money is exhausted.

Although administered through the state's Department of Education, the grants are actually federal funds created under the amendments of the Vocational Act, P.L. 94482, explained the spokesperson. These funds are to be used in existing or in creating vocational education programs in local school districts.

The funds are either doled out under entitlement provisions or on a project basis.

Entitlement funds are earned by each school district based on the number of students, wealth of the district, and the amount of poverty existing, explained the spokesperson. In applying for entitlement funds, the school district must tell the state how the funds will be used and what benefits to the students will result. Documentation of the labor market must accompany the application to show students will be educated so they can flow into the labor force — showing they won't be trained for non-existent jobs.

Approval for project funding is done on a priority basis as money becomes available with the school district showing how the project will be done and why it's needed.

In the case of the Greenwood School District, the spokesperson stressed the vo-ag program is a "true need of the community and has the community's support." Last year funds in both categories of grants were approved for the program, but were rejected because they called for matching funds from the local tax payers.

This year, Superintendent Wolferd stated, the vo-ag program will be implemented unless the school board decides it is economically unfeasible and beyond what the taxing body can stand.

To get the program started, Wolferd said he estimates a cost in the range of $35,000 for salaries, equipment and summer programs.

"The grants will help us get off the ground the first year, but where do we go for money the second and third years?" he asked. "We need to study this as a long range thing."

Wolferd projected the cost to the school district, even with the federal grants, will be about 3 to 5 mils, at the rate of $7000 per mil. Currently, the school district's taxes are running at 65 mils, however Wolferd stressed there will be an increase in milage for programs other than the agricultural one.

There used to be a vo-ag program offered at Greenwood during the 1950's, explained Wolferd, but it was dropped for "lack of interest". He said the popular sentiment of the times was job opportunities were found in the cities rather than on the farms.

Although the cost of reestablishing the program is substantial, a number of farmers say they feel it's worth it.

Dairy farmer Charles Byers of R2 Millerstown stated, "I've been disgusted for the past 20 years — ever since they dropped the vo-ag program in the school. I was always for it and never wanted them to take it out of the school."

Byers said he, personally, will realize no benefit from the vo-ag program if it becomes reality next year. He mentioned his only child is graduating this year. But, he emphasized, a progam in agriculture is essential for the Perry County farming area.

As a member of the Greenwood Farmers, Byers said he hopes to help influence the school board's decision to go ahead with the vo-ag curriculum.

But according to Gerald Lyter, president of the school board and 'hobby' farmer, the board needs little persuading.

"We are interested in the agricultural program, and we feel we have the student interest and

Pork producers decide to take tough stand

LANCASTER — Pork producers are drawing the line; irresponsible attacks on their products will no longer be tolerated.

The National Pork Producers Council and the American Meat Institute have stepped forward to fight the irresponsible attacks leveled against meat products on a recent segment of the Mike Douglas Show

NPPC and AMI requested and received equal time on the nationally syndicated Mike Douglas Show to respond to the derogatory statements about pork presented by Ralph Nader and Michael Jacobson, who is the director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest

On the February 22nd show, Jacobson and Nader leveled an attack on bacon and hot dogs, naming them to the "Junk Food Hall of Shame" The segment climaxed with Jacobson and Douglas throwing the products on the floor

Within days after the show aired, NPPC and AMI filed objections with the Mike Douglas Show NPPC also notified the Federal Communications Commission, which controls broadcast licenses.

In his letter, Orville Sweet, Executive Vice President of NPPC stated, "Nader and Jacobson, by use of innuendo, implication and unsubstantiaed information, have created more consumer distrust in the nation's food supply

"The flippant and irresponsible manner displayed by Douglas in handling this subject, so important to consumer health and the financial welfare of a traditional American industry, should be called to account," he wrote

Sweet also demanded that equal time be granted, a demand that was recently met in an April 1 phone call from the show's producer

In a similar letter, C Manly Molpus, President of AMI, pointed out the many inaccuracies in statements made by Nader and Jacobson

"First, Mr Nader incorrectly stated that color is added to hot dogs," said Molpus "Natural meat color is maintained by the use of small amounts of sodium nitrite "

Molpus also pointed out that Jacobson's inferrence that hot dogs were made entirely from fat is untrue Hot dogs are manufactured from a mixture of meat and meat trimmings, and contain no more than 30 percent fat

Jacobson also implied that consumption of bacon could be harmful to human health In an extensive review of the Newberne study, USDA and FDA found insufficient evidence to support a conclusion that nitrites induced cancer in experimental rats

Further, Jacobson made no mention of the risk of botulism if nitrites are not used in the manufacture of hot dogs and bacon

The taping date for the debate between Nader, Jacobson and pork industry representatives has not been confirmed, but is expected to be in late May or early June The air date is, as yet, unscheduled facilities. Our problem is finances.

'We'll be reviewing our budget for the coming year next month If it turns out favorable, the chance. of seeing a vo-ag program at Greenwood are 99 percent However, if the budget turns out to be unfavorable, its chances are less than 50 percent."

If the school board faces financial defeat again this year, Lyter said he plans to keep on trying for the vo-ag program.

"We won't give up on something the community wants and needs," he proclaimed.

Lyter said he realizes personally the importance of a vocational agriculture program, having been enrolled in the curriculum himself while attending Greenwood.But, Lyter emphasized, the vo-ag program planned for today is much more structured than when he went through.

"Back then the vo-ag program didn't prepare a student for college. I had to drop out my senior year to pick up the credits I needed to go to Penn State and study ag engineering," he explained "What we're planning is a high quality curriculum — not a place where students can dive out of work."

Two other Perry County schools offer a vocational agriculture program, Newport and West Perry.

Recent Newcastle outbreak eradicated with little impact

LANCASTER — Despite its potential for destruction, last fall's nationwide outbreak of highly contagious exotic Newcastle disease was eradicated with little impact on the U.S. poultry and pet bird populations, a U.S Department of Agriculture verterinarian said this week.

"Shipments of infected or exposed birds led USDA inspectors to 2,046 pet stores, private and commercial aviaries, and fancy and commercial flocks in 45 states," said Keith Hand of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

"Altogether, there were nearly 7 5 million birds on the affected premises. We had to destroy 30,080," he said

Of the birds destroyed, he said, 9271 came from three locations in Miami, Fla., and 5089 from one location in Houston, Texas. Over 1000 of these birds died before the disease was confirmed, he said.

"These four locations were the original outbreak sites–all subsequent spread occurred from these sites," Hand said.

"All birds shipped from the four primary sites were tracked and purchased for diagnostic purposes," he said. "In 504 instances, testing showed no trace of the disease, and no further birds were bought.

"However, 45 wholesale and retail premises were infected and 10,240 birds were destroyed there," he said. "The disease also infected 105 birds in 18 private homes."

Infected birds were found in 23 states–from Hawaii and California in the west, to Maine and New Jersey in the east, from Minnesota in the north, and to Texas and Florida in the south

"Had we not moved rapidly to eradicate this disease," Hand said, "I have no doubt that the virus would have spread to poultry, causing massive losses to farmers and driving up prices at the retail, consumer level."

Interest rates climb on storage, dryer loans

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Increases in loan rates to 14.5 percent for 1981-crop loans and farm storage facility and dryer loans, and other changes in the facility loan program were announced by a U S Department of Agriculture official

Edward Hews, acting executive vice president of the Commodity Credit Corporation, said the increase affects all facility and dryer loans approved beginning April 1 and 1981-crop commodity loans

Further, he said, beginning next October, the interest rate of 1981 crop and facility loans made after today will carry a "floating" interest rate, subject to adjustment each October 1 and April 1.

Previously, CCC had charged 11.5 percent on crop loans and 12.5 percent on facility and dryer loans

The new interest rate and the variable adjustment procedure will not apply to 1980 crop loans and facility and dryer loans already in effect, Hews said.

Interest rates announced today are based on the cost to CCC of borrowing money from the U S treasury, Hews said. The change to a variable interest rate on outstanding loans will enable CCC to adjust rates in line with treasury borrowing costs, he said.

Hews also announced the following changes in the farm storage facility and dryer loan program:

— An increase in the loan down payments from 15 percent to 25 percent.

—Storage needs will be based on one year's production instead of two years'.

—All existing storage space will be considered in determining storage capacity. In the past, space already in use to store grain under the farmer-owned grain reserve was not counted in figuring storage needs

—The maximum term of new loans will be five years; existing loans are for eight years

—The maximum amount a farmer may borrow or have outstanding under the program is reduced from $100,000 to $50,000

Hews said the higher interest rate and the actions for making facility and dryer loans announced today are expected to result in a savings to the U.S. government of about $29 million for the balance of fiscal year 1982 and $145 million for fiscal year 1982.

Job surplus in agriculture attracts urban employees

LITITZ — If you want to work in agriculture don't go near the farm Many American farmers are having economic problems, but those who either sell to the farmer or market their products are experiencing a boom

Consequently, jobs are plentiful for those with an agricultural or a business background, according to a 1980 U.S Department of Agriculture study

A job surplus exists because agriculture is changing, its economic base shifting from the farm to the food and agricultural corporations

American agricultural exports are steadily increasing, and the U S Farm Export Education Project in Washington anticipates that farm exports could more than double by 1985, creating at least a million new jobs

Agriculture will be the growth industry of the 1980 s, according to Gordon Rausser, professor of agricultural economics at the University of California - Berkeley

Agribusiness employers agree that there are job openings in agriculture

I can't prove it but I think there may be more jobs than in any other industry," said Marvin Vinsand of the U S. Feed Ingredients Association, which often helps grain companies fill job vacancies

Vinsand explained that increasing numbers of people with urban backgrounds are working in agriculture The demand exists for computer technicians, communications specialists and machinists, to name a few

In state universities, 30 percent of the agricultural majors now come from urban areas Ideally, said Vinsand, companies are looking for a hybrid, someone with an understanding of rural life and the business savvy to compete in the international market of agricultural companies But since this is a rare combination, most agricultural companies offer extensive on-the-job training programs.

Lynn Galbraith came to the Cargill Corporation fresh from the Army and was trained to be a grain broker Seven years later, he now buys and sells oil for Cargill on the international market

I know people with college degrees in English literature and Italian Renaissance history who were trained by Cargill for the grain business One was just transferred to work in the Chicago futures market '

Agricultural companies employ people in their sales forces to consult with farmers on technical and managerial problems, and these are the jobs that come the closest to farming

Bill McCullough, a cattle feed salesman and regional manager for the MoorMan Feed Company of Quincy, Illinois, explained that interpreting agricultural research is one of the most interesting aspects of his job

We try to find the nutritional research that fits the cattle operation; there is no lack of research findings, but a lack of people to fit it to the feeder's needs McCu[illegible] was trained as a scientist, but likes his current advisory work better

A lot of young people want to go into research, ' he says, but in research you don't get the satisfaction of seeing it implemented."

Traditionally, research has been one of the few areas in agriculture that was open to women But today, according to Vinsand women are probably the fastest growing part of agricultural employment, especially in marketing

Animal sciences is also a popular field for women, and McCullough notes that it not uncommon to see women working in cattle feedlots.

Women seems to have a sixth sense for identifying sick animals," he explains 'Lately, I have noticed that there are more women in the dairies handling dairy cows, and I know they are in demand in the large swine areas."

Chuck Bearden, who recruits employees for the MoorMan Company, reports the feedback from his managers is that some of the women have what it takes to make good salespeople "

They work in the research barns, they feed and castrate the pigs and work in the nursery But what is the farmer's wife going to think when a young saleslady and the farmer are down at the barn?

'We re an old and conservative company, and it was a long time before we sought and encouraged women to be involved in sales," he says

Don Sutton, who is director of Career Services at Colorado State University, says that, "We are still seeking resistance from a lot of farmers to women in sales and consulting."

He thinks that women working in sales "may not make it up to becoming district managers "

Lisa Anderson is Ralston Purina's first territory manager for hog feed in Iowa, a job which involves both sales and technical consulting. She came to the job with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Animal Science and spent a year in company training "doing everything from cleaning hog barns to arranging meetings "

She firmly believes that sales is a good road to management in agriculture

'Many of our people in research or marketing go through sales They may not be in it for long because they may not be suited for it, but it gives them a chance to see what's happening out there in the field.

A starting salary for a salesperson, she estimates, ranges for $12,00 to $14,000 a year

"After that you work for commission," she said.

Teaching is another field which is wide open in agriculture In fact, there is a critical shortage nationwide of high school and college agriculture teachers, according to Richard Tenney, assistant professor of agriculture and occupational education at Cornell University.

Tenney said the number of students enrolled in college and high school agriculture courses has increased three fold since 1960.

Students at Redwood High School in Humboldt County, California, even petitioned their school to offer agriculture classes They claimed that since the state of the economy in that semi-rural area was such that they could not be sure of finding jobs, they at least wanted to know how to grow their own food.

Adult education classes in agriculture are being added to community college schedules to update people in agriculture-related jobs on new techniques.

Tenney explained that accredited teachers who would like to become certified to teach agriculture can enroll in a summer program at Cornell so they would not have to quit their existing jobs.

Unemployed auto workers may be able to find jobs with farm implement dealerships repairing and assembling farm machinery.

"Almost every dealer has been looking for good mechanics," said Max Sauder, Managing Director of Mountain States Hardware and Implement Association. "Today's tractor or combine is as complicated as a Cadillac," he explained, and said that the dealers need diesel mechanics, and hydraulic and electrical specialists

The pay averages $7 to $8 an hour, considerably lower than the United Auto Workers' pay scale, but the cost of living is also lower in small towns than in the cities where auto plants are located

Said Carl Luther of Luther Equipment in Greeley, Colorado, I'd hire a man today if he had his own tools and a knowledge of tractor motors, it's the same principal as a car, but on a larger scale"

There are unique employment opportunities in agriculture for the physically handicapped

Seed analysis is an employment opportunity particularly suited to the handicapped, according to James Echols, Professor of Agronomy at Colorado State University

After conducting a survey of seed companies in the U S , Echols learned that employee turnover is extremely high because of long hours of sitting while examining seed At present, there is no training program for seed analysts, but Echols has been working with the Colorado State Vocational Training Center in Fort Collins to develop such a program which will begin this year

The program is not limited to Colorado residents Graduates of the 12-week course have a good chance of finding a job, Echols belives, because the companies responding to the survey were enthusiastic about the possibility of hiring trained analysts Beginning salaries for seed analysts range from $10,000 to $12,000 and up to $18,000 to $20,000 for experience personnel

Agriculture offers more overseas job opportunities than almost [illegible] industry explained Sutton of Colorado State University Some American agricultural firms do even more business abroad than at home

Commodity associations, such as the Soybean Association, also have overseas representatives to build demand for American agricultural products and to participate for international trade agreements

[illegible] agricultural development has become one of the few job areas for people who want to work in agriculture but do not want to work for government or corporations

Marla Pollack answered a job announcement on a college bulletin board to work on a family farm in Brazil Although she had been an agronomy student and was committed to working in agriculture, she did not want to work in agribusiness She is now managing a vegetable farm in Central America

The international relief programs hire people for Peace Corps — like jobs consulting with farmers in other countries

CARLISLE — Leonard A Green, of Carlisle, has been elected to the National Wildlife Federation's Board of Directors representing five mid-Atlantic states and the District of Columbia

Green, director of public relations for the United Telephone System's eastern group, will serve as a regional director for Delaware, Washington D C , Maryland, New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania

For the past 25 years he has organized a series of County Youth Conservation Camps throughout the state

The National Wildlife Federation, the nation's largest citizens conservation organization, also elected C Clifton Young of Reno, Nev , as its new president Elections were held at the concluding session of the Federation's 45th Annual Meeting in Norfolk, Va

The Annual Meeting was attended by delegates from 53 states and territories who adopted 41 resolutions guiding Federation policy for the coming year

Included were two which call upon the 97th Congress to reauthorize the Clean Air Act and the Clean Water Act without any amendments that would lower present air and water quality standards

said, There s a lot more flexibility here than in the Peace Corps It is good work for someone who wants to be in agriculture but doesn t want to go into research or big business agriculture

Nabhan explained that the relief organizations have a low profile compared to the Peace Corps, therefore, they can confront political and food distribution problems that government-affiliated programs cannot touch

Although Meals for Millions is an international organization, Nabhan works in Arizona on the Papago Indian Reservation near Tuscon, where he has helped local farmers develop an innovative irrigation system

Other international assistance organizations which have projects in the U S include the American Friends Service, the Save the Children Foundation and the American Field Service

A Job Opportunities Bulletin is published monthly by the New Trans Century Foundation It lists all of the jobs currently available in international development, a large percentage of which are in agriculture Write Job Opportunities Bulletin, New Trans Century Foundation, 1789 Columbia Rd , NW, Washington, D C 20009

In order to find jobs in agriculture, Vinsand of the U S Feed Ingredients Association, recommends contacting commodity associations, such as his, or the Woolgrowers or Soybean Associations

It is not our main function, but we often serve as middlemen for agriculture companies that are looking for job applicants

He also suggested writing to agricultural businesses in one s home state

Galbraith got his job at Cargill by interviewing at a local Cargill office and then being recommended to people at headquarters in Minneapolis

According to Vinsand, most large employment agencies located in cities have a person specializing in agriculture Many agricultural companies advertise openings in the want ads of major midwestern newspapers, such as the Minneapolis Tribune, the Chicago Tribune and the Kansas City Times, which can be found in local libraries

Agriculture trade magazines also publish job openings nationwide

Challenger™ Feeding System

This is the breakthrough technology that made it possible to feed grain to dairy cows according to individual needs—automatically. The De Laval® Challenger™ Feeding System is the obvious choice for dairy farmers who want electronic grain dispensing at a moderate installation cost.

The Challenger system is controlled by neck-worn transponders which store feeding instructions for each cow; these provide a radio link with feeding stalls where cows are fed upon command. The Challenger system has capabilities demanded by the most modern operation, yet it's feasible for herds as small as 25 cows. May we show the surprising figures?

Delaware plans Ag Day activities

NEWARK, Del. — Dust off your bib overalls and head on down to the University of Delaware's Agricultural Hall on Route 896 in Newark.

On Saturday, April 25, the students of the College of Agricultural Sciences will roll out the red carpet for their annual all-day extravaganza, Ag Day. From 10 a.m. till 10 p.m., come rain or shine, you can find out everything you want to know about farming and gardening, and have a lot of fun in the bargain.

Students and professors will be on hand to answer your gardening questions, conduct tours of the grounds and facilities, let you pet the animals, and even prepare a fine country dinner.

Come early for the Horticulture Club's plant sale. Give your garden a head start with a selection of flower and vegetable seedlings grown by students of the club. This group also sponsors a plant clinic, so bring in your droopy dracenas for diagnosis.

You can pick up gardening ideas as you tour the Clark Garden and the Hort Club's new display garden outside Agricultural Hall

Children can ride ponies, watch chicks hatch, and take part in games such as the pedal tractor race. (Tractors will be provided.) There will be games for grown-ups, too, including a tug of war and a hay bale toss.

Everybody can munch hot dogs and funnel cake, bring home a loaf of homemade bread, pose for an old-time portrait, and watch a genuine livestock show and lamb sale.

Attend plant workshops, take a look at the student photography contest and small crafts, enjoy a hay ride, and learn about no-tillage, endocrinology, pathology, soil composition, and reproduction.

A highlight of the day's events is Alpha Zeta's traditional chicken barbecue. From 2 to 6 p.m. you can buy half a chicken, potato salad, roll and butter, homemade dessert and beverage for a modest price, since the students raised the chickens according to market specifications. Tickets are available at the door.

The day will conclude with a country square dance, from 7 to 10 p.m.

Lancaster soil mapping 90 percent complete

LANCASTER — A comprehensive review of the Lancaster County Soil Survey by the Soil Conservation Service and Penn State personnel last week examined the soil mapping completed on 90 percent of the county acres According to Robert Knight, SCS soil scientist, only 60,000 acres of the 605,500 acres remain to be soil mapped.

The soil survey is being prepared for many different people, farmers, gardeners, homebuyers, engineers, or builders, can use it to plan the use of land

Why is soil information needed? Great differences in soil properties can occur within short distances. Soils may be seasonally wet or subject to flooding. They may be shallow to bedrock. They may be too unstable to be used as a foundation for buildings or roads. A high water table makes a soil poorly suited to basements or underground installations.

These and other soil properties affecting land use are described in the soil survey, along with the location of different soil types on detailed maps. Anyone needing soils information or assistance in land use planning should contact the Lancaster Soil Conservation Service Farm and Home Center, Room 4, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster, Pa 17601; telephone 717/299-1563.

Farm Bureau says spending is out of control

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Charging that the federal fiscal system is "clearly out of control," Farm Bureau warned that federal spending will reach the one trillion dollars per year mark in five years unless current taxing and spending trends are reversed.

Speaking for the American Farm Bureau Federation, Harry S. Bell, president of the South Carolina Farm Bureau and a member of the AFBF board, testified before a Senate judiciary subcommittee in support of Senate Joint Resolution 43 which proposes an amendment to the Constitution that would alter federal fiscal procedures.

Federal Spending is clearly excessive in terms of the taxpayer's ability to pay, Bell said, and continuing federal deficits have fueled an inflation that threatens the future of the private enterprise system.

Bell testified that Farm Bureau supports the four-point economic recovery program now before Congress, noting that on balance, the package is a fair, evenhanded solution to getting this country back on its feet.

"Our (Farm Bureau's) objective is greater fiscal responsibility, and we will support any proposal that moves toward this goal," Bell said.

"As a result of lack of restraint in the past, we have had ever higher inflation and taxation, unbalanced budgets, erratic monetary policy and a host of other problems," Bell said. "Our point is that in order to get a hold once and for all on inflation requires a limit on the amount of resources the federal government can spend."

Bell concluded by saying that SJR-43 is a "step in the right direction" and illustrates real progress toward fiscal responsibility but should be modified to assure that federal spending be limited to a fixed percentage of the gross national product.

CCC sells sample grade corn

WASHINGTON, DC — The Commodity Credit Corporation has completed selling about four million bushels of government-owned "sample" grade corn back to the private market, according to Edward Hews, acting CCC executive vice president

The corn, marketed from early February through the end of March, was part of 160 million bushels CCC purchased last year following the embargo of grain shipments to the Soviet Union announced January 4, 1980.

Hews said the corn had been designated, "sample" grade because a high percentage of kernels were cracked and broken through shipping and handling, and had to be sold to prevent losses due to further deterioration of the grain.

No further sales offerings of storable CCC-owned corn will be made before May 15, the final loan settlement date for corn held in the farmer-owned grain reserve, Hews said.

"In selling these four million bushels, CCC made every effort to avoid disrupting local markets," Hews said. "The prices received ranged from $2.05 to $3.52 per bushel, depending on quality and location differentials."

About one-fourth of the corn sold was located in Texas, with sales of lesser amounts in 13 other states, Hews said.

About 71 percent of the sales were made to the warehouse in which the corn was stored.

Farmers assets, capital increases

QUARRYVILLE — The total production assets in agriculture increased from $162.8 billion in 1960 to $796 4 billion in 1980. This is an increase of 390 percent

The value of production assets per farm increased from $46,000 to $372,000, or an increase of over 700 percent

The assets per farm worker also increased over 700 percent in this same 1960 to 1980 period The decrease in farm numbers and farm workers along with a rapid increase in capitalization has accounted for this large increase in production assets per worker The increase this past year exceeded 15 percent

This kind of an increase indicates the tremendous need for detailed management of farms, especially as it deals with farm finances, says Frederick A Hughes, Extension farm management specialist, at Penn State University.

If a farmer is going to make a reasonable return on this kind of an investment he must have a very large output per man hour on his farm This means that the efficiency that he attains in producing the unit of a farm product has to be great Farm operators who get low production from crops and livestock and have poor labor efficiency will find it very difficult to remain in farming with this much investment per worker

Farmers who are borrowing money to buy inflated assets can be in real trouble if their income to repay loans lags behind the larger loan payments resulting from the increase in borrowed funds

One of the major problems evident on farms today is the slowdown in production efficiency of crops, livestock and man labor

The production efficiency of these items increased greatly during the last 15 years, but have changed little in the past three or four years.

Today's farmer must be continually looking for new technology to improve his production efficiency if he is going to maintain his profits, adds Hughes

COLUMBIA — Sen. Ralph Hess and Rep. Ken Brandt will open a district office at 461 Locust Street in Columbia.

The office opening will be held on Friday, April 24, from 4 to 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

The legislators said the office will be managed by Dave Hickernell, a native of Marietta and a student at Elizabethtown College. Dave has worked with Brandt in the past and his services in dealing with state-related problems will enable him to better serve the public.

Hickernell said he "looks forward to helping individuals with state problems."

District office hours will be: Tuesday and Thursday from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Friday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Sen. Hess is Chairman of the Senate Education Committee while Rep. Brandt serves as the House Majority Policy Committee Chairman.

"We hope to be in the district office as much as possible, but our responsibilities require us to spend much time in Harrisburg," they said.

They added that the office will be able to handle state matters such as: obtaining application forms for senior citizen property tax and rent rebate programs, birth and death certificates, transportation and unemployment problems.

TV station starts new program

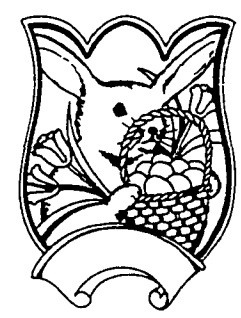
PHILADELPHIA — Farmers, agriculturists and sharecroppers who want to stay informed with the latest in farm legislation, get an up-to-date poultry report, and see how the fluctuation of prices is affecting crops can find it all in Gary Geers' "Farm Market Report," on Channel 3's (KYW-TV) new early morning news program, 3-today, 6:30 a.m. weekdays.

Geers, a 28-year veteran of KYW-TV, speaks with representatives from the field of agriculture, including experts associated with land grant colleges – Penn State University, Rutgers University, and the University of Delaware – who can bring early morning viewers up-to-the-minute reports affecting the farmer and the consumer.

In addition to Pennsylvania and New Jersey, reports include farm news from the states of Virginia, Maryland, and Delaware, and the crops grown in those states.

Each Friday, Geers and guest Frank Wiechec, director of the Philadelphia Produce Market, lets viewers know what is available in fresh produce markets especially those grown in the tri-state area.

Early risers can also glean consumer-oriented information from Farm, Home & Garden, hosted by Geers, beginning at 5.49 A.M. weekdays. During this program, Geers offers cost-saving recipes, tips for tending home gardens, new ways to grow vegetables, and what's happening with pesticides and herbicides.



Be prepared for rootworm season

LANCASTER — Farmers planning to plant second or third year corn should definitely consider using a soil insecticide, recommends Gary Beland, research entomologist for Funk Seeds International.

Rootworm–a problem for corn farmers across the country–will cause trouble again this season, possibly in even greater force than last year, Beland says.

"Based on adult rootworm beetle counts in the central Corn Belt last season, we're expecting an increase in larvae populations for 1981," he adds.

For individual farmers, predictive scouting of beetle populations in late summer could have indicated the need for soil insecticides.

Beland advises farmers who counted an average of at least one beetle per plant between July and September, or those who don't know what their count was and plan to plant second or third year corn, to use a soil insecticide

Also, he says, if there were more than 4000 volunteer corn plants in a soybean field last year, and a farmer plans to plant corn in the field this year, insecticide application should be considered.

That number of volunteer corn plants was sufficient to attract egg-laying beetles in in August and result in enough larvae this year to damage corn

"Organophosphates such as Amaze, Counter, Dyfonate, Lorsban, Mocap, and Thimet offer a measure of control in continuous corn," Beland says.

Farmers having less than satisfactory control with the carbamate insecticide, Furadan, should consider switching to an organophosphate insecticide

Beland says control of rootworm in the larval state is easiest, although adult beetle control can be achieved with a number of insecticides

Crop rotations, which kill rootworm larvae by starvation, are still the best defense against rootworm

"A corn-bean rotation is good in areas where northern and western rootworms exist Small grains works too," says Beland.

"Rotations aren't as effective in areas of heavy southern corn rootworm infestations, however, because that species has a wide range of hosts"

In addition, plowing or discing may help lower larval populations by damaging eggs in the soil, or in the case of southern rootworm, by killing weeds that serve as a food source, Beland says

Later in the season, when adult beetles are actively feeding and laying eggs, growers can determine the effectiveness of spring larvae controls and the potential for rootworm larval damage for the following year.

Count the number of beetles on 50 plants at least twice during August. To do this, grasp silks in the palm of the hand and squeeze before any beetles escape

Open your hand slowly and count and the beetles that come out of the silks for each of the 50 plants.

"If an average of one or more beetles are found per plant then the field should be treated with a soil insecticide next season if corn is to be planted," Beland concludes.

BOZEMAN, Mt. — The American Simmental Association's Second Annual Photo Contest will close June 1, according to Executive Vice President, Earl B. Peterson. "During our first photo contest, 94 individuals submitted 237 photographs for consideration," he said. "We're anticipating even greater participation this time."

First prize in the initial contest went to Jaci York of Sultan, Washington, while Wink Lundell of Granite Falls, Minnesota took second place.

Revised contest rules have established two divisions of competition: Junior, for those 21 and under, and Senior. Seven place winners in each division, or 14 in all, will be recognized, and more than $600 in prizes will be distributed.

Criteria for judging includes three major factors: ability to favorably represent Simmental cattle; quality of photography; and eye appeal, human interest and originality.

The announcement of place winners will be made during ASA's Annual Summer Conference, which is scheduled for July 16-19 at Asheville, North Caroline.

Complete rules and entry forms may be obtained by contacting the American Simmental Association, One Simmental Way, Bozeman, MT 59715.
